Miami grand prix 2025

Oscar Piastri achieved a remarkable feat on Sunday by securing his third successive victory at the Miami Grand Prix, beating McLaren teammate Lando Norris and maintaining a significant gap of over 35 seconds from Mercedes' George Russell in third. This triumph makes Piastri the first McLaren driver to win three consecutive races since Mika Häkkinen in 1997, further solidifying his position as the leader of the world drivers' championship by an impressive 17 points over Norris. Norris Wins Sprint Race With Lucky Break, Overtakes Piastri Under Safety Car The sprint race ended with a dramatic turn of events after Liam Lawson's collision with Fernando Alonso brought out the safety car, allowing Norris to take the lead and secure his victory. As the teams started on wet-weather tires due to rain, rapid drying track conditions forced them to switch to slicks, which significantly impacted the strategy of the race. Meanwhile, Oscar Piastri took advantage of a mistake by Norris during a pit stop and briefly held the lead, but ultimately lost it when Alonso crashed. Other drivers, including Yuki Tsunoda, Lewis Hamilton, Lance Stroll, and Carlos Sainz, made the switch to slicks early on, which led to nearly every car pitting under the safety car. Max Verstappen received a 10-second time penalty for unsafe release after colliding with Kimi Antonelli in the pit lane. Kimi Antonelli dominated the qualifying session, setting a blistering lap and securing his first pole position in F1 history at just 18 years old. He will start from pole on Sunday's Miami Grand Prix Sprint. Norris finished second behind Piastri but ultimately overtook him when Alonso crashed. Norris expressed no regret for taking the lead under the safety car, as it proved to be a strategic move that paid off in his favor. With this victory, Norris moves closer to the top of the championship standings, and he will look to maintain his momentum on Sunday's Miami Grand Prix Sprint. Pierre Gasly 7th in FP1 of the Miami GP, Oscar Piastri Topped the Charts Miami marks the second round of the 2025 Formula 1 World Championship, with a Sprint weekend format that differs from traditional races. The event features a shortened 100km Sprint race on Saturday, followed by a full Grand Prix session later in the day. The qualifying session is also shorter than usual, lasting only 44 minutes compared to the traditional three rounds of 60 minutes each. Teams do not have to make mandatory pit stops as the track distance is too short for tire wear to be an issue. Championship points are awarded to the top eight finishers in the Sprint race, with maximums points going to the winner, followed by seven for second place, and so on. The order of the podium will be the same as the finishing order. Oscar Piastri topped the timing charts with a time of 1:27.128 in the first free practice session. - Qualifying results for the Formula 1 Crypto.com Miami Grand Prix show Oliver Bearman at the top with a lap time of 1:28.771 in his Haas-Ferrari, followed closely by Pierre Gasly in the Alpine-Renault with a time of 1:29.084 and Esteban Ocon in the other Haas-Ferrari just behind in third place with a time of 1:29.179. The official results from the 2025 Miami Grand Prix have been confirmed by the FIA, with Oscar Piastri of McLaren securing the win ahead of his team-mate Lando Norris and George Russell of Mercedes. This marks another instance where the driver on pole failed to convert their advantage into a race victory. Max Verstappen relinquished his lead to Piastri after being forced to brake late, leaving him unhappy. The Scuderia Ferrari's decision-making was called into question as they opted to swap drivers multiple times during the race, resulting in Charles Leclerc and Lewis Hamilton crossing the finish line in P7 and P8 respectively. The final classification is as follows: Position Driver Team Gap 1 Oscar Piastri McLaren— 2 Lando Norris McLaren+4.630 3 George Russell Mercedes+37.644 4 Max Verstappen Red Bull+39.956 5 Alex Albon Williams+48.067 6 Kimi Antonelli Mercedes+55.502 7 Charles Leclerc Ferrari+57.036 8 Lewis Hamilton Ferrari+60.186 9 Carlos Sainz Williams+60.577 10 Yuki Tsunoda Red Bull+74.434 Additionally, a rule change for the 2025 season has abolished the extra point awarded for achieving the fastest lap, which previously added an incentive for drivers to abandon their races and focus solely on claiming this bonus point. Verstappen's title hopes were dealt a blow as Oscar Piastri took the win in the Miami Grand Prix, ahead of Lando Norris. The McLaren driver initially dropped back after a contentious moment with Verstappen at Turn 2, but managed to fight back and take second place. In contrast, Piastri's pace was consistent throughout the race, allowing him to maintain his championship lead. Norris's chances were further hindered by a virtual safety car activation that gave George Russell a boost, securing third place for Mercedes. Meanwhile, Ferrari's team orders debacle saw Charles Leclerc and Lewis Hamilton finish in seventh and eighth places. Hamilton responded with frustration towards Ferrari's request for him to stay behind teammate Leclerc, labeling it as "not good teamwork." This came after a series of exchanges over team radio, where Hamilton pointed out that he had previously swapped positions with his teammate in China. Meanwhile, Williams secured a double points finish, beating out both Ferrari drivers and demonstrating a strong performance despite halting its 2025 car development. This critical haul solidifies their position as the "best of the rest." Additionally, Red Bull's Max Verstappen continued to show impressive pace, despite being a new father, and was involved in an incident with Norris at the start of the race that may revive debates over racing guidelines. Verstappen’s Red Bull struggles to keep pace with McLaren rivals in title fight.
