

Dr. Diana Pinto, is an intellectual historian and writer living in Paris. She is the daughter of Italian Jewish parents, was educated in the United States and is a long time resident of France. She is a graduate of Harvard University where she also obtained her PhD in Contemporary European History. She has written about this multiple belonging in her intellectual autobiography, Entre deux mondes, (Odile Jacob Paris 1991).

Her work has focused on the strengthening of pluralist democracy in post-1989 Europe. In the 1990's she was editor in Chief of Belvédère, a pan-European French review as well as special adviser to the Political Directorate of the Council of Europe for its Civil Society programs in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. Since then she has written extensively on the political implications of the post-1989 Jewish presence across Europe. In 2006-2009 she conceived and directed a Ford Foundation Project, Voices for the Res Publica as a Senior Fellow of the Institute for Jewish Policy Research of London. The project inaugurated a conversation on possible new paths toward a common belonging for Europe's various religious and ethnic majorities and minorities, by respecting different identities while also transcending them in the name of the 'common good.' She has been a frequent lecturer in academic and also Jewish forums, both in Europe, the United States and Israel. She has held Fulbright, and American Council of Learned Societies fellowships, and been a fellow of the Collegium Budapest in Budapest, and of the Einstein Forum in Potsdam. She is also a founding member of the European Council of Foreign Relations. She is currently teaching at the Association Pierre Claver in Paris created to integrate asylum seekers and political refugees through a better understanding of France and Europe.

Her latest book, Israel has moved, (Harvard University Press 2013) has also been published in French (Israël a déménagé, Stock) and in German as Israel ist umgezogen (Suhrkamp 2013).
