

Jay Pomrenze worked at Bankers Trust Company for 26 years where he was a member of the firm's Management Committee. With the sale of Bankers Trust to Deutsche Bank in June 1999, Pomrenze joined Kelly Doherty to form their investment vehicle Caymen Partners. Jay began the next phase of his life in Israel. His unstructured studies included Bible, Philosophy lite and early Christianity within its Jewish context. None of these led to a degree. He has served on various nonprofit and for-profit Israeli company Boards and is a founding Partner of Clarity KCPS, a global Israeli based Asset Management firm. He and his wife Huti are active in charity projects through their private family Foundation. They have 3 married children and 9 grandchildren. He earned degrees in finance and theology.

Huti Pomrenze spent her early married life raising a family. After relocating to Israel with the family she and a partner opened the first Paint Your Own Ceramics Studio in the country which they operated for 10 years. She and Jay are active in charity projects through their private family Foundation. Huti earned her degree in Fine Arts.

Additionally, they are taking advantage of what they deem the current Golden Age of television series.