

2022 NFL Draft Scouting Report: QB Kenny Pickett, Pitt

Our QB grades can and will change as more information comes in from Pro Day workouts, leaked Wonderlic test results, etc. We will update ratings as new info becomes available.*

This is my first in-depth study of the 2022 NFL Draft season, and I've already come up with my early January 'lock' bet of the 2022 season – Kenny Pickett is going to be the top pick in the 2022 NFL Draft... I didn't intend to start my studies with who I thought was the top guy. I skipped on doing a summer 2021 preview on Pickett because I didn't think anything hot was there in the data...then he went out and had this huge 2021 season and got me interested in seeing what happened, and here we are.

I'm not saying he has my endorsement as being worthy of the #1 pick – I'm just saying he's the NFL's kind of top QB prospect. My job is not to guess pick spots -- I'm here to analyze whether Pickett is that good or not, and we will...in a moment. But back to the media cloud/storm coming soon...

I really do mean that Pickett is going to be the #1 QB taken in the draft...and #1 overall pick, despite the fact that the entire mock draft media doesn't have him in their top 3 overall yet...but they have no idea what they're doing. They never do, and they're especially awful at reading things in January before the NFL Combine. They're the same people who, all summer 2021, said Spencer Rattler was the franchise QB #1 overall pick desire of the NFL...and four weeks into the 2021 CFB season his own team didn't want him.

Pickett has the right size/look of a top NFL QB. He has the 2021 production to back that up. He has a 'tough guy' approach to the position. He's smart, well spoken, makes a great presentation. He checks all the proverbial 'boxes'.

If you can, go bet money on Pickett as the #1 pick in the 2022 NFL Draft today – because I don't see any mock drafts saying he will be the #1 pick right now. It won't be a pick made by Jacksonville, but it will be to some team acquiring that pick...and I'll speculate on that in the last section here.

I've run the numbers on Pickett, done a background check/investigation, and watched/studied his game tape...and the way I would describe him is a hybrid of Joe Burrow and Justin Herbert.

Hold on a second...breathe...gather yourself. A Burrow-Herbert hybrid is near-perfection scouting claims...so that would be worthy of your breath being taken away. But I need to add a piece to the scouting recipe...it's the 50/50 hybrid mix of Burrow-Herbert, in style/mechanics/movement and skill, but with about 25% of the skill/talent sucked away.

Pickett has some Burrow in him, but he's not near as good. Pickett has some of Herbert's style, though he's not nearly as good. BUT...Pickett is a good/legit NFL prospect.

JANUARY 4, 2022

Pickett has a Burrow type look, movement, throwing ability, and height/size...but Pickett seems a bit thicker/more sturdy. Pickett has the mental side of the game like Herbert (both guys very cerebral)...Pickett is willing to hang in the pocket to the last moment like Herbert.

Where Pickett falls short is... although he has a pretty solid arm, he doesn't have quite the arm of Herbert. Pickett is not as Joe Montana/Tom Brady-like of an assassin as Joe Burrow, but Pickett does read the field very well and is not jumpy in the pocket. Pickett's coolness in the pocket, for me, is one of his two key attributes...but his biggest flaw comes off that pocket calmness as well, in that Pickett can stand calm in a muddy pocket a while because he's tough, but when Pickett goes to throw from muddiness he doesn't have the live arm Herbert does, so Pickett waits and waits as he reads the field, and then tries to throw with his feet not set...he tends to flutter and float passes, where Herbert throws laser beams flatfooted. Not a big issue for Pickett in college, but it will hurt him in the faster-to-react NFL.

Pickett's top attribute is his ability and desire to read the field, go through multiple progressions...and his calm/tough demeanor in the pocket that allows him to stay put longer to read and react to the field – a rare trait among NFL QBs.

Being 70-80% of a Joe Burrow and/or 70-80% of a Justin Herbert...is still a pretty damn good NFL QB prospect. And I believe he is a legit NFL starting QB talent, although I'd slot him more as a #11-20 QB talent in the NFL (in time/a hope) vs. thinking you got a Burrow-Mahomes-Allen-Herbert-Rodgers-type super-elite skillset. Pickett is more a Kirk Cousins, Matt Ryan level QB...annoyingly good for an NFL team and has his spurts of production but less known for his number compilation than he is for being a leader and a 'winner'.

Pickett has 'B' and 'C+' skills all over his scouting grade details, but his 'A' attributes are harder to measure – leadership, toughness...and how it keeps him cool in the pocket, smart/cerebral. When you have those type of 'A' attributes, it can carry/make up for the 'B' and 'C' attributes and you can be a very successful NFL QB. A franchise QB even. That's why I think NFL scouts and coaches are gonna absolutely fall in love with him – he's a good-to-very good QB talent, maybe a great one someday, but definitely a good one...and the way he carries himself in interviews, as a captain/leader, with the smarts, the confidence, the pedigree, the toughness...the whole presentation is going to sail him to the universal media mock draft #1 pick status in short order. My guess is by the end of February, soon after the Senior Bowl (if he really goes there).

Pickett has the build (6'3"-6'4", 220), the mind, the college performance, the toughness, and the arm talent to be a #1 pick.

Thinking back to the 2018 QB prospects = Pickett is bigger, way more talented, and more leadership oriented than Sam Darnold was, and Pickett's confidence is not arrogant to people like Baker Mayfield's was. Pickett is a bigger, as tough version of Baker...not the pure arm/passers talent but it's debatable.

JANUARY 4, 2022

Thinking back to the 2019 QB prospects = Pickett has all the physical tools and all the personality (for what the NFL looks for) much more than Kyler Murray. The NFL, non-Kingsbury, was scared of Kyler being a bust. Pickett is the way more talented version of Daniel Jones, plus the much tougher version.

Thinking back to the 2020 QB prospects = Pickett will be seen as more mentally and physically tough than Justin Herbert when coming out in the draft, but not as physically gifted as Herbert. Bigger and less injury prone than Tua. Not sure Pickett could've been more well thought of than Joe Burrow, but I bet some would have preferred Pickett's toughness/attitude.

Thinking back to the 2021 QB prospects = The media and football people so conned themselves on Trevor Lawrence, no one would have thought Pickett a better prospect (but they should have). But they definitely would have loved Pickett over Zach Wilson because he's bigger and Wilson is seen as smug where Pickett is 'confident', a leader.

I think Pickett will make it as a very solid, good NFL QB with a chance to keep learning and developing as he goes to be a Pro Bowler. He might be the Carson Wentz people were looking for years ago, only a much better QB talent.

Most everything I see with Pickett is positive – a good arm/can make all the throws. He has good pocket awareness and is mobile enough to get away from trouble. He reads the field very well for a college QB, one of the best QB prospects I've seen in taking time to read the field in-progress, under duress – he has no fear in the pocket, which allows him to hang in and make secondary and tertiary reads. He's got a franchise QB face/look. He's got a franchise QB 'body'. He speaks like a person who you would love as the face of the franchise. He's not too serious but not silly...he's focused but affable. He's just excited to play football and is good at it. A natural leader in development.

I am mostly glowing about him but note I'm more glowing on his presentation/package than his real scouted skill. I'm never totally dazzled watching him play...just like I'm never bowled over by watching Carson Wentz or Kirk Cousins or Matt Ryan, but I know they're worthy enough NFL talents...just not the 'wow' QB's like Rodgers, Herbert, Burrow, Mahomes, Kyler, Allen types.

Between the top tier elites and the second tier very capable guys is probably Pickett's upside. That's not a bad thing. The Dak Prescott zone, maybe? Guys who are never seriously going to be mentioned as an obvious Hall of Famer, but who most teams would be happy to have as their starting, long time QB. Like Eli Manning if he had not won the Super Bowls and not had the name 'Manning'.

Kenny Pickett, Through the Lens of Our QB Scouting Algorithm:

Had a 'meh' first four seasons at Pitt and was projected as a 5th-round pick talent by the draft advisory committee this time last year...but he thought he was better, so he took advantage of the COVID extra year to return to play and went out and did a near-Burrow type pop from 'OK'/not really noticed to 'boom' the next year. Pickett posted 42 TDs/7 INTs in the 2021 season in 13 games.

All 13 games in 2021 with 2 or more passing TDs.

Is not a speedster, but has good feet...like a Wentz, Rodgers type runner but often shows a Josh Allen mindset to be a physical runner when he has to...he rushed for 20 TDs in 49 career games at Pitt. A Dak Prescott type runner.

Pre-Senior Bowl and pre-Combine projected measurables...

6'3.7"/220, 9.5"+ hands

4.7+ 40-time runner, with a low 7.0s three-cone.

Now that I've written and noted it a few times, now I'm wondering if the computer thinks he has some Dak Prescott in him too. I haven't run the comps to this point. Let's see...

The Historical QB Prospects to Whom Kenny Pickett Most Compares Within Our System:

Well, our Computer Scouting models didn't like Dak for a match but I still do.

The Computer sees more of an old school/throwback type of QB in Pickett...guys like Matt Ryan, Eli Manning were in the mix of the comps for a bit as we set the Pickett data in, but those old school guys had a much worse Comp. Pct. in college (in our weighted, adjusted numbers). Pickett is from the new school of QB with new school offenses, so it's somewhat apples-and-oranges in the data to try and compare players from different decades.

Old school Rivers and Palmer were probably better talents/passers than Ryan-Eli, but I'm not debating that. The Computer sees an old school star potential in Pickett.

2022 NFL DRAFT SCOUTING REPORT

JANUARY 4, 2022

QB-Grade	LJax Rating	Last	First	Yr	College	H	W	Adj Comp Pct	Adj Yds per Comp	Adj Pass per TD	Adj Pass Per INT
8.584	5.33	Pickett	Kenny	2022	Pitt	75.8	220	63.8%	12.4	16.2	66.1
9.355	1.86	Palmer	Carson	2003	USC	77.0	232	60.3%	12.6	18.5	58.0
9.865	0.69	Rivers	Philip	2004	NC State	77.0	229	69.5%	13.7	17.4	50.6
8.024	2.02	Garoppolo	Jimmy	2014	E. Illinois	74.2	222	66.9%	12.5	12.1	70.4
6.179	4.92	Carr	Derek	2014	Fresno State	74.8	218	64.0%	10.3	15.3	86.7

'LJax rating' – new for 2022, as we re-do our grading systems to better identify/reward the spread offense QB prospects...looking for the runner-passer talents.*

“Adj” = A view of adjusted college output in our system...adjusted for strength of opponent.*

A score of 8.5+ is where we see a stronger correlation of QBs going on to become NFL good-to-great. A scouting score of 9.5+ is rarefied air—higher potential for becoming great-to-elite.

QB's scoring 6.0–8.0 are finding more success in the new passing era of the NFL (2014–on). Depending upon the system and surrounding weapons, a 6.0–8.0 rated QB can do fine in today's NFL—with the right circumstances...but they are not 'the next Tom Brady' guys, just NFL-useful guys.

2022 NFL Draft Outlook:

As we begin the 2022 NFL Draft journey, with Pickett as the first study out of the gate, I see Pickett being ranked as a top 10 overall and #1-2 QB prospect. So, he's not a 'hidden' prospect by any means. I just think as the real evaluators start factoring in, Pickett will become the obvious/slam dunk #1 overall pick in this draft because any hint of an elite QB should be.

Jacksonville won't make this pick, so what team(s) will move up for Pickett? Detroit is a fit...Dan Campbell will like Pickett's moxie. The Lions could offer their #2 + the 1st-pick they got from the Rams this draft year. The Giants could be in play if they wanted to, by trading their TWO 1st-round picks to move up. Carolina I'm sure would like to get in on it.

A few teams should/will be interested, but some teams have ready-made extra draft capital in 2022 to get it done if they want.

