KASEY JUEDS

Talisman

As the small-leaved, small-yellow-flowered plant is said to be, against witches and thunder. So lines painted on the stone in your palm mean a time of waiting. All night the deer build the house with their breath, the long grass flattened beneath their sleep. Big bluestem, little bluestem, invisible seam of river behind trees. You can close your hand over the stone until it swallows your heat, or search for lost things in this shallow water and find them one by one by one.
