For those of you who have Adobe Photoshop, this is the recipe for making your own coloring book pages:

Open your photo in Photoshop.

Step 1:

Duplicate the background layer.

Step 2:

With the background copy selected, Image / Adjustments / Desaturate

Step 3:

Duplicate the background copy

Step 4:

With Background copy 2 selected Image / Adjustments / Invert

Step 5:

With Background copy 2 still selected change the blend mode from normal to Color Dodge. This will likely make the layer almost completely white. No worries, that will change in the next step.

Step 5:

Apply a Gaussian Blur to taste. For most of the photos in this booklet, I chose 9 pixels.

Some photos benefit from an additional step. Take the black and white result and make a shape using the plus sign in the Library panel. Put it into your library then bring it back in as an overlay. This is only available in the latest Photoshop CC versions. If you have an older version of Photoshop, you can download the Capture app from Adobe and take a picture of that black-and-white image.
