CHANGE – It's inevitable

By Al Reimche

It seems like the only stable thing in our world. The moment we get comfortable with a situation or plan, or even people, we find ourselves dealing with change. It is the inevitable constant of life. Gail Sheehy is quoted as saying, "If we don't change we don't grow. If we don't grow we aren't really living."

Changes from wet to dry, cool to warm, from school days to summer vacation would have been enough for one month, but that was not to be the case.

Changes – Wayne Wentland, who has been serving as interim Vice President for Education, begins his retirement. He has served for over nine years in our education department, first as associate education director, then for the past two years as VP for Education. We have appreciated his passion for our schools and educators. Our office is also losing Dale Milam who has served with distinction as an associate superintendent for the last two years. Dale has decided to re-join the faculty at Milo Academy. We have been blessed to have both of these men working for the best of our schools.

"If we don't change
we don't grow.
If we don't grow
we aren't really living."

Changes – Gale Crosby, recent principal of Portland Adventist Academy, has stepped into the vacancy left by Wayne, and Matthew Butte, recent principal of Columbia Adventist Academy, will be joining the team in the education department in place of Dale Milam. David Davies, an educator from southern Oregon, will also be spending some time working with our schools as a part-time associate superintendent.

CHANGE

Change – Another change affecting the Conference has been Monte Torkelsen's decision to transition from Youth Director in charge of Big Lake Youth Camp to chaplain and Bible teacher at Portland Adventist Academy by the end of July. As a result, we have asked Tracy Wood to fill the position as Youth Director, and we will begin the search for an Associate Youth Director who will also serve as the Big Lake Youth Camp Director. Monte has served with distinction within our youth department for 20 years and has been a major influence in the lives of youth throughout our Conference. Even though he will be missed, his ministry to our youth at PAA will continue.

Change – Just a couple of weeks ago, I met with three churches who had decided to explore the possibility of merging. Though other congregations within our conference have done this, it is still very uncommon. That Sabbath evening, all three churches (Columbia Gorge, Gresham, and Open Arms) met, and after prayerful discussion, voted to form one church. The members of the newly-formed church understand that their territory has just been expanded and the reason for this merger is to develop a stronger team to address the commission God has given.

Changes can be hard, and yet in some cases, good. The transitions to different assignments, or different settings, or different stages of life can be difficult to experience but are a part of “really living.” Even in the New Earth we will be dealing with change – the growing knowledge and understanding of the plan of salvation, the joy of ever discovering and growing in our grasp and knowing Jesus and His love for us. Difficult as it is, I want to be “really living.” In fact, I can't wait for that “twinkling of an eye” change that Jesus has waiting for us.

The 5 Best Practices for Successful Church & School Websites

By David Sharpe

Developing a website can be a daunting task. The huge amount of information available online can quickly become overwhelming, and it's easy to get bogged down in technical details that have little to do with a successful site.

Fortunately, creating a site that attracts visitors and brings them to your church or school does not depend on learning HTML, PHP, web server maintenance, or any of the other intimidating technical details. (Services like AdventistChurchConnect.org exist to do all of that for you.)

The success of your site depends on just five best practices. Four of them can be implemented by nearly anyone who is willing to put some time and thought into the effort, and Good News Advocates can help you with the fifth.

1. FOCUS ON YOUR VISITORS

One of the most common problems I see with business websites is the tendency to focus on the company rather than the customer. “XYZ, Inc. has been in business for 127 years, and is the thought leader in left-handed widgets...” and so on. Unfortunately, it's also a common problem for church and school websites.

As you develop your site, be sure that all of your keywords and content are geared toward the way your visitors are thinking when they search online:

- What are they looking for? What words did they use in the search engine to find you?
- What needs are you supplying? What solutions are you offering?
- How can you help them in the most efficient way?
- Is it easy for them to learn more, find your facility, contact a real person, etc?

2. BE CONSISTENT

Your site needs to be consistent within itself. Look at your site from a “big picture” perspective:

- Look for a smooth, logical flow that connects pages and messages to each other and to the rest of the site.
- Is the “voice” the same across all pages?

- Is the look and feel the same on all pages?
- Is the information consistent on each page? If the homepage says that church starts at 11:00 am, does another page say 11:15?

3. BE CLEAR

Each page should have user-friendly flow that is clear and easy to follow. Answer these questions from the visitor's perspective:

- Where am I (on the website)?
- Who are you?
- What do you offer?
- How does it help me?
- How do I navigate the site?
- Where do I go next?
- How do I learn more?
- Is the information accurate/current?

4. REMEMBER THAT “CONVERSION” HAS MORE THAN ONE MEANING

Online marketers use “conversion rates” to measure how many visitors are persuaded to sign up for a newsletter, make contact by email or phone, make a purchase, etc. Your website has a slightly different purpose, but you still want people to do something when they visit your site.

Here's how to get them to take that action—be sure that every page has:

- A clear promise or message
- A presentation of benefits, not just features
- Proof and credibility that supports the message on that page
- A clear “call to action” which can be unique to each page, but must be consistent (see #5)
- Links for easy access to other pages on the site.

5. THINK COMPETITIVELY

Show how your church or school offers the best solution available. Demonstrate that you are unique, and provide value that other churches or schools do not offer.

In addition to showing how you are unique, your site should play by search engines' rules. This includes using keywords that help seekers find your site first in the search engines. Looking at your site from a search engine's perspective is a specialized process, and you may want to get some help to ensure that it's being done properly.

A WEBSITE THAT WORKS

It may seem a bit simplistic, but let someone else deal with the technical issues; if you focus on these five concepts, your site will look better and be more effective than others in your local area.

Good News Advocates (GNA) is available to help you implement any of these Best Practices. To make use of our free services, go to <http://www.AskGNA.org> and let us know: How can we help you?

David Sharpe is the Communications Director for Good News Advocates. To learn more about GNA and its services, email davids@goodnewsadvocates.org or 406-646-6070.

NOTE: David Sharpe will be presenting a workshop at Gladstone Camp Meeting this year on setting up and using a website for your school or church. To learn more about this seminar, visit www.OregonConference.org.

2013 GLADSTONE CAMP MEETING

This year the Oregon Conference will host its 135th camp meeting, and its 84th camp meeting at Gladstone! – And it's going to be a great year!

Hispanic Camp Meeting will be held July 11th-13th this year, and Gladstone Camp Meeting will begin the evening of July 16th and run through the 20th. Come for the fellowship, the spiritual enrichment, the education, and the fun! – There is always a lot of fun! From the corn dogs you can find at the Pathfinder-run Snack Shack, to the waterslide and obstacle course near the Children's Amphitheater, there is something for every age group to enjoy.

This year's speakers and presenters come from a wide range of backgrounds and disciplines, and we think everyone will find something of particular blessing in the presentation lineup.

Just a few of the 30 speakers this year are John Bradshaw, John McVay, Bernie Anderson, Russell Burrill, Gordon Pifher, Sasha Bolotnikov, Stephen Dickie, and Jason Worf!

We're particularly excited about two speakers who will be presenting workshops on sharing the hope of Jesus' soon coming with followers of two religions very different from our own – Islam and Judaism.

In the children's divisions they will be learning more about Jesus' love on SonTreasure Island, through activities, crafts, music, stories, and the new friends they make!

We hope you'll be able to join us this summer in Gladstone. To learn more, visit www.OregonConference.org or call 503-850-3500.

A MOTTO INSPIRES AN AMAZING GIFT

By Viktoria Kolpacoff & Fonda Cox

Mילו Adventist Academy's senior class waited in eager anticipation. Graduation day had finally come, and every member was there to take part in the festivities, to walk across the stage and receive their diploma. Even though the class wasn't exactly the same as when it started freshmen year, there was a unique bond between these graduating students.

That bond was strengthened over Senior Survival, where students had to work together to complete various team building activities. However, that wasn't the only thing that united the seniors. Working together in classes also brought them closer together. One such class that made a rather large impact on them was Bible 4, taught by Mrs. Carol Sumerlin. They listened to sermons by Lee Venden, Dick Deurksen, Anil Kanda, and others. One thing in particular stood out from the many concepts and ideas they learned. One thing seemed to strike a chord with each student and helped them grow in their relationship with God. Their class motto, taken from a Lee Venden quote, "It's not what you do, it's who you know and who you know will change what you do" summed up this class's goals.

Not only was the class united in learning about God, but they also wanted to help others. Toward the end of the year, they discovered that several seniors had large school bills to pay off before participating in graduation. In order to make sure everyone could be involved in graduation, and to decrease the financial burden on their classmates, the class voted to give up a special class trip to help out their classmates. They donated their funds to help a few students' school bills. They worked to help each other, united in God's desire for their lives.

NOTE WORTHY...

MONTE TORKELSEN TO JOIN PAA TEAM

Monte Torkelsen will assume the role of Portland Adventist Academy (PAA) chaplain for the coming 2013-14 school year. He will also serve as the school's director of development. Torkelsen has worked with the Oregon Conference for 20 years, where he most recently has directed youth ministries and Big Lake Youth Camp. Prior to his service in the Oregon Conference he held ministry roles in Milton-Freewater, Ore., and Perth, Australia, where he was also youth director. Torkelsen is a graduate of PAA, Walla Walla University and Andrews University. He and his wife, Darla, have three sons — two are currently attending WWU and one a student at PAA.

KENYA RULES IN FAVOR OF ADVENTIST STUDENTS

Kenya's High Court has issued an interim order for public schools to exempt Seventh-day Adventist students from attending classes on Saturday, the day Adventists observe as the biblical Sabbath. The immediate order comes during a case involving the Adventist Church's Kenya Union Mission against the Ministry of Education and 26 schools it said have not followed constitutional guarantee of practicing one's religion. The court's presiding justice addressed the case again on June 6.

NAD APPOINTS NEW PUBLIC AFFAIRS AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY DIRECTORY

The North American Division (NAD) recently appointed Orlan Johnson, an attorney and former partner at Saul Ewing, to lead the Public Affairs and Religious Liberty department. In 2009, Johnson was appointed chair of the Securities Investor Protection Corporation. In that role, he successfully recovered $7.2 billion for investors of the Bernie Madoff scam. Greg Hamilton, Northwest Religious Liberty Association president, says Johnson "will bring that same type of savvy in endeavoring to restore Religious Freedom Ministry in the local church, and particularly in the vital public arenas of government and public relations..."

MARK FINLEY FACING HEALTH CHALLENGES

Adventist Church evangelist Mark Finley, who is currently assisting with the "Revelations of Hope" meetings in New York City, has recently been facing some health challenges and is requesting prayer. In a public email sent in June from Dan Jackson, North American Division president, and Dr. Peter Landless, General Conference health ministries director, members were informed that Finley has premyeloma. The condition, known as MGUS (monoclonal gammopathy of undetermined significance), is not cancer, but is caused by a small number of abnormal cells in the bone marrow. Finley, and his wife, Teenie, are of good courage and praying God will be glorified through this. Please keep them in your prayers.

PUBLISHING HOUSES ASKED TO CONSIDER MERGER

According to a report issued in June through the Adventist News Network, the boards of Pacific Press Publishing Association in Nampa, Idaho, and Review and Herald Publishing Association in Hagerstown, Md., have agreed this week to consider a yet-to-be-developed proposal toward a merger. This action is in response to a request from General Conference (GC) and North American Division (NAD) administrators following analysis of the current publishing setting and related distribution systems. It builds upon work already done by study groups throughout the past several years. The request also suggests a potential transfer of identity of North American-wide publishing work from GC-sponsorship to NAD-sponsorship. Each publishing house board has authorized its chair and president to represent the institution on a taskforce assigned to develop a detailed merger proposal for future consideration by the boards and constituents.

HOLOCAUST SURVIVOR SPEAKS AT NPUC OFFICE

Holocaust survivor Alter Weiner spoke at the North Pacific Union Conference office this week. In an hour and a half presentation, Weiner shared his story of being arrested in his native Poland when the Nazi army invaded. He spent the rest of the war in five different prison camps, eventually being freed by the Soviets. For years afterward, Weiner never spoke publicly about his time as a prisoner. It was only after he retired to Hillsboro, Ore., that he was encouraged to speak and write about his ordeal. He says his motivation for speaking is to share what has happened in the past and ensure it doesn't happen again. Watch the video of his presentation at <http://bit.ly/19TZrfz>.

NO INJURIES IN ALASKA WWU PLANE ACCIDENT

A Walla Walla University staff member and student are safe and uninjured following an airplane accident June 19 near Dillingham, Alaska. Kerry Straub, director of aircraft maintenance for the WWU aviation program, was piloting WWU-owned plane, when he made an emergency landing due to mechanical difficulties. Straub, and freshman aviation student Brianna Eckler, were transported to Dillingham where they will join other WWU students working in a commercial fishing camp for a brief period this summer. Special tracking systems installed in all WWU-owned planes alerted both university aviation personnel and Alaska emergency teams, allowing for such quick and safe response.

TILLAMOOK HOSPITAL TO CHANGE NAME

Tillamook County General Hospital in Tillamook, Ore., will change its official name to Tillamook Regional Medical Center, effective June 3. The hospital, first opened in 1950, has operated under a lease arrangement with Adventist Health since 1973 — an agreement recently extended to 2045. The new name will more effectively reflect the hospital's expanded services, including five rural health clinics, four locations with 24/7 Advanced Life Support ambulance services, and home health and hospice care in patient homes throughout Tillamook County. "This name change represents our confident looking forward to the advancing future of health and wellness services in our region," says Larry Davy, hospital president.

TRANSITION MANAGER NAMED FOR ADVENTIST MEDIA CENTER

The North American Division (NAD) has named Max Treviño as transition manager for the Adventist Media Center (AMC). Treviño, retired Southwestern Union Conference president, was appointed to this position after the April 29 vote of the AMC board to allow the media ministries to relocate from Simi Valley, Calif. In this position, he will work on behalf of the NAD to oversee all matters relating to the transition at the AMC.

ADVENTIST HEALTH TO BUILD EAST PORTLAND CENTER

A future medical facility will take shape in the Parkrose area of east Portland, Ore., to provide enhanced health care for future Adventist Health patients. A groundbreaking ceremony was held May 30 with Portland-area civic leaders. The new 23,000 square foot complex, expected to open during the first quarter of 2014, will include an urgent care center, physical therapy clinic, laboratory services and digital imaging center. It will employ approximately 80 staff positions.

WWU APPOINTS NEW VICE PRESIDENT

David Richardson Jr. will be the new Walla Walla University (WWU) vice president for student life and mission beginning July 1. Richardson comes to WWU from Riverside, Calif., where he served Concorde Career Colleges as director of student affairs on seven campuses. Richardson is also a pastor and has served the Southeastern California Conference in church growth and evangelism. He holds a doctoral degree in educational leadership from Argosy University and a Master of Divinity from Andrews University. He will replace George Bennett, who has been serving as an interim vice president for the past year. He and his wife, Melanie, have two school-age sons.
