A HEARTY BREAKFAST, THE WORD OF GOD ...and Baseball!

By Nancy Stinson

It was a rainy February afternoon in Oregon and I longed for springtime and baseball season to begin. My students know I love baseball and how that love is intensified whenever my son or former PAES student and current Oregon State Beavers pitcher, Beau Day are playing. Maybe checking the Oregon State Baseball schedule for Beau's next home game would help ease my blues. Watching Beau and the Beavers play would be good therapy. As I searched the website, my attention was grabbed by the featured video "Inside Corner with Matt Boyd, A Day in the Life of a Player." Only a few minutes into the video I was grabbed again when this Beaver player said, "I begin each day with a hearty breakfast and the Word of God." The video showed Matt to be a man of faith who put family first and ball playing second. What a role model, I thought, for young men like my seventeen-year-old son, not only on the field but off as well.

Not long after seeing the video, God put it on my heart to pray for Matt. One morning during my devotional time, I was reading from Tony Dungy's book Uncommon Life. The book's focus is to use your platform, however big or small, to glorify God. I felt I needed to let Matt know that what he was doing off the field was making an impact for God and I wanted him to have a copy of the book. A few days later during morning worship with my first grade class, I shared about Beaver baseball and Matt. I told the children that while I didn't know Matt Boyd personally, I was certain that he loved Jesus as much as we did and that we should pray that Matt would continue to share his love of God. So we prayed ... for Matt ... for Beau ... for the team. The next day during our prayer request/praise time, a student asked us to pray again that Matt would continue to let his love for Jesus shine. Thus began a weekly Monday morning "Beaver Baseball Briefing" by Mrs. Stinson. I'd share how they had played over the weekend and we'd lift them up in prayer for continued witnessing, good health, and success in school. In our class we give "Heart-prints" to others to thank them for blessing us, or as a way to encourage and support. "Therefore encourage one another and build each other up, just as in fact you are doing," 1 Thessalonians 5:11.

...AND BASEBALL

One afternoon the students wrote letters to Matt – Heart-prints, if you will. The expressions of love for Jesus and others, the questions they asked of Matt, and the pictures they drew were priceless. One drawing was of Matt pitching surrounded by angels with the caption, "God's Angel Army is always by your side." We packed up the letters and the devotional book and talked about the purpose of a Heart-print—to "give of the heart" and not expect to receive anything in return.

Imagine our surprise the day when we heard back from Matt! Our silent screams turned to joyful noisy ones! Matt had sent each child a signed NCAA PAC-12 autographed baseball with his favorite Bible scripture, Psalm 18:2. He also wrote a letter sharing what joy our pictures and letters meant to him. He said he placed them in his locker as a reminder that he plays for reasons that are bigger than baseball. He went on to address each child by name and answer a question they asked of him. What a remarkable young man of faith and character! Furthermore, he addressed my son in the letter as well. He knows he is a pitcher and suggested he read the book, Seven Days in Utopia by David Cook. Matt has two scriptures written on his baseball glove—Psalm 18:2 and Philippians 4:13. In addition, he has "SFT" on the glove, which stands for "See God's face, Feel God's presence and Trust God's love." This brings him peace when he faces doubt and trouble while pitching on the mound. So far, Matt has had an outstanding year and looks to be drafted in June. The book and message made a huge impact on my son and I've shared the book with many others.

Long story short, we had to meet Matt Boyd! The OSU Beaver team came to Portland for an afternoon game so we loaded up the bus and headed to meet Matt and Beau. It was an impactful and treasured few minutes. The children asked lots of questions, and both young men were so kind and made the kids feel special. We ended our visit holding hands and praying to our Heavenly Father who brought us together and made us friends. We hope to have Matt visit our school in the fall and share his love of God during School Family Worship time.

Looking Through the Rearview Mirror

By Al Reimche

Each month I have the privilege of thinking back on the events of the previous month and have come to realize that without a rearview mirror, it is extremely easy to forget God's blessings and keep charging into the next week or month. Here are some of the blessings and miracles I experienced this month.

I had the privilege of attending some of the meetings of the NW Adventist-laymen's Services and Industries (ASI) at the beginning of the month and was blessed by the number of Adventist individuals representing businesses and organizations from around the Northwest. It was exciting to be around people who have an understanding and passion to be "members in ministry." Seaside weather was at its sunniest best and I am aware of a few who, along with feeling a burning in their souls, experienced a burning of their skin.

Also at the beginning of May, I met with the Milo Academy board to address agenda items and hear reports of progress. One of the discussions included addressing some great opportunities to provide a healthy work-study program for our school. Our school has been blessed this past year with around 94 students. Given the fact that the previous year had seen a record number of students graduate, this student count was a positive indication that Milo still is a valued and viable academy in our Conference.

One report shared at the meeting with Milo was the completion and inspection of the bridge accessing the Academy campus. As you may have been aware, last year we received an engineer's study indicating that the bridge was only capable of handling cars and small pick-up trucks under five tons. This sent a shock through the campus because all the food supply, heating fuel, and student buses can only access the campus over the bridge. After some rewelding, rebuilding, and reassessing, we are happy to report that the bridge is again capable of carrying up to 94,000 pounds. At the beginning of the year this seemed like an insurmountable outcome, but God blessed both with experienced welders willing to take on the task, and supportive engineers willing to address our needs. Though we still see the need to begin plans for providing a second access to the campus, we are not as pressed as before to accomplish that immediately.

I was also blessed to experience the Pathfinder Fair again this year. Over 900 pathfinders and staff took part in the day-long fair held in Albany, Ore. Over 100 9th through 12th grade students were part of this group, indicating their continued involvement with Pathfinding in our Conference. Another blessing was seeing 30+ youth step forward indicating that they had been baptized into God's family this past year. I praise God for each of these students and the work done by churches, families, schools, and Pathfinder leaders in leading these youth to Jesus. As at previous Pathfinder fairs, the booths describing the skills and honors were very well done. It was interesting to have the students share at each of these displays what they had learned. And then there was the live-streaming video work, coordinated by our Communication Department, but directed, filmed, and reported by our youth and young adults, was an additional blessing. It is evident that our youth are not some coming phenomenon years from now, but are willing, trained, inspired and active now. They are the church of today.

These are just three of many events from this past month, but without that backward glance, that look in the rearview mirror, those blessings would easily be forgotten.

... the bridge is again capable of carrying up to 94,000 pounds!

SALVATION FROM A PROSTITUTE

Her voice cracked through the New England accent, "I would give my right arm if my daughter would talk to me again." I lowered my head to keep the emotions from showing. There was an uncomfortable pause, then her voice quavered aloud again, "No, I would give both my arms." There was not a dry eye in that AA meeting.

Her story was that of a young mother, just 16 years old. She had been a waitress, prostitute, hotel hostess, and most recently a janitor. She had put her only daughter through college. Her daughter now works as a journalist for the New York Times. She even told us her daughter's name, which shocked me. I looked her up and she really is a journalist for the Times.

I listened to how she had been on a bender of alcohol and heroin. It was in December of 2012 that she had an interaction with her daughter that she couldn't even remember. It was after this incident that her daughter refused to communicate with her.

I looked at this woman, who appeared to be close to my age. I too was a young parent. I thought of my life struggle and fight for my kids. I remembered how I decided to fight for my son through what I knew. At first it was running and working with the homeless. My PTSD got in the way, carrying my son into an emergency room after an overdose, while he begged me to let him die; his drowning of our family dog; a brutal physical fight that ended in the ER; visiting him for years in psychiatric facilities, and finally prison. I had given up hope, waiting for the day I would die, not caring.

I sat with bowed head, tears streaming down my face; she would give both her arms. Why, of all my mornings, did I decide to go to an AA meeting today?

I'm not alone. I'm not the only fighting these struggles. I owe it to my son and my life to stay clear and fight this battle of life.

What would I give to be able to talk to my son with a clean healthy mind? I would give my right arm; no, I would give both of my arms....

I think that is what Jesus did for us. He gave both his arms stretched wide on a cross so that my son might someday be healed. I also think that He stretched His arms wide so that they could embrace me some day.

I often think that I want proof from God, showing me His nail-pierced hands. I now know the proof lies in His outstretched arms in a comforting hug.

He was the descendent of a prostitute, I believe her name was Rahab; or was it 'Rehab'? Who are we to judge?

ADVENTSOURCE CELEBRATES GRAND OPENING

AdventSource employees, board members, and friends gathered on April 17 to celebrate the grand opening of AdventSource's new building located on the campus of Union College in Lincoln, Nebraska. The program was followed with tours of the new facility.

As the official ministry resource distribution center for the Seventh-day Adventist Church in North America, AdventSource serves local churches by providing ministry-focused books, DVDs, seminars and curricula, apparel, Pathfinder and Adventurer Club uniforms and supplies, webinars, event registration, and more.

The process leading to AdventSource's move began in early 2012 when Union College determined that AdventSource's space was needed for additional classrooms. On April 9, 2012 AdventSource's board of directors voted to move forward with plans for constructing a new building.

Because AdventSource provides a significant amount of student labor and other services for Union College, the college wanted to keep AdventSource nearby. Union College offered AdventSource the option of a long-term land lease to allow for the construction of a new facility at Prescott Avenue and 51st Street.

"Union College continues to be blessed by an organization that does much to mentor college students and provide student labor opportunities for them," said Gary Bollinger, Union College vice president for finance. "We are very blessed in having such a wonderful relationship with AdventSource and we are just delighted that they are in a new facility that will better serve their mission."

Ground was broken for AdventSource's new building on May 31, 2012 while construction began in June and was completed in December. The warehouse was moved by December 28 and AdventSource was open for business in the new facility on January 2. Throughout the entire move, all orders continued to go out on a regular basis.

The new 17,300 square foot building houses all of AdventSource's departments including the call center, graphic arts, meeting planning, accounting, IT, resource development, and website support, along with operations and warehouse space. The new building also contains some additional space for future growth.

NAD President Dan Jackson said, "We appreciate this partnership and we will appreciate it long into the future. It is a mutual blessing."

If you would like to learn more about the many services AdventSource provides to churches across the North American Division, call 402-486-8800 or visit www.adventsource.org.

Better Late Than Never

By Marta Davis

Margaret loved watching Better Life all the time! On her 100th birthday, her son, from Fountain Valley California, called the Grants Pass Seventh-day Adventist Church. He said that his mother watched Better Life constantly and that if someone would visit her from the church, he was sure she would become a Seventh-day Adventist. The interesting thing is that her son wasn't even an Adventist himself!

Ron & Marta Davis, managers of Better Life, got the message and went to Margaret's home for a visit. While getting acquainted, they asked her about her past and discovered that they had lived in the same small town in Southern California at the same time as Margaret and her family. In fact, Margaret's youngest daughter had gone to school with Marta and was the drum majorette while Marta was on the drill team! This helped them develop an immediate friendship, and they invited Margaret to an upcoming evangelistic series.

She attended every one of the 26 meetings of Revelation Speaks Hope held by Pastor Steve Cook at the Grants Pass Adventist Church, and at the end of the meetings, she was baptized at the amazing age of 100! She continued attending church with a huge smile on her face every week until 102. It's amazing to watch God work through the media ministry of Better Life to touch all classes and ages of people across Oregon, Washington and Northern California. Remember, with God, it is never too late!

ADVENTISTS RESPOND IN OKLAHOMA, AND YOU CAN HELP

A lot of people are hurting after the rash of tornadoes that hit Oklahoma recently—and tornado season is only beginning. Adventist Community Services Disaster Relief (ACS-DR) is there to help provide desperately needed items and support as people work to pick up their lives. But ACS needs your help. There are several ways to make a donation to Adventist Community Services. Call 1-800-381-7171 to make a donation or visit www.communityservices.org.

UCC HEALTH MINISTRIES DIRECTOR STILL MISSING

Over two weeks ago now, Dr. Jay Sloop, Upper Columbia Conference (UCC) health ministries director disappeared on a morning walk while in the Ukraine doing health training. The search has continued to center around Zamkova Gora, a city park near downtown Kiev. City surveillance cameras recorded Sloop entering the park in the early morning hours Tuesday, May 14, but no images of him leaving the park have been found. Searchers, including church members, students, police, military police, and U.S. Marines from the U.S. Embassy, have scoured the rugged park, but still turned up nothing. The local authorities have now classified Dr. Sloop's disappearance as a criminal case. "Every day groups of people from area churches and police are involved in the search," says Viktor Alekseenko, Ukraine Adventist Union president. "We are doing everything we can to provide all possible help and assistance in the search for Dr. Sloop." Read updates at the family's blog at <http://bit.ly/17x6b43>.

MISSION INSTITUTE BECOMES SOULS NORTHWEST

The Northwest Mission Institute is expanding its original six-month training program to two years and has changed its name to SOULS Northwest. This North Pacific Union Conference institute will be affiliated with the successful SOULS West training center operated by the Pacific Union Conference. Extending the training program makes it possible for SOULS Northwest to train students who will work with the literature ministries departments of the local conferences within the NPUC as leaders for their Youth Rush summer literature evangelism programs. The existing six-month program will still be offered for adults past college age with experience in the workforce, as well as Walla Walla University degree-seeking students. Two certificates will continue to be offered to students: Outreach Leadership and Literature Ministries Leadership. More information can be found at <http://missioninstitute.org>.

CANCER STUDY SEEKS PARTICIPANTS

The Adventist Medical Center, in Portland, Ore., is working with the American Cancer Society to find participants for a long-range study on cancer. This Cancer Prevention Study-3 (CPS-3) seeks to help researchers better understand the genetic, environmental and lifestyle factors that cause or prevent cancer. Researchers are looking for long-term participants between ages 30–65 who can come to a Portland location for the initial visit. All follow-up surveys will be completed via mail-in forms over the next 20–30 years. If you, or someone you know, is interested in signing up for the study, visit <http://adventisthealthnw.com> for more information at <http://bit.ly/115cmnu>.

PORTLAND STUDENTS HIT THE STREETS

More than 260 Portland Adventist Academy (PAA) students, staff, area pastors and parent volunteers fanned out across Portland streets for the fifth annual all-school service day in May. Students did a variety of work, including graffiti removal in the neighborhoods surrounding PAA. Other groups worked at food banks, homeless ministries, and on yard work projects for disabled and elderly people.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ENCOURAGES WOMEN IN LEADERSHIP

The North Pacific Union Conference (NPUC) Executive Committee has voted steps which further affirm women within the church's mission. While this stance does not address the women's ordination issue, it resonates with the overall North American Division efforts to encourage and support qualified women in pathways to pastoral or administrative roles. Among other actions at its regular quarterly meeting held May 8 in College Place, Wash., the NPUC Executive Committee voted to encourage local conferences to develop clear, measurable goals designed to give women opportunities in leadership positions; to gather local women leaders at least once a year to discuss their experiences, issues and lessons learned; and to encourage churches to follow the updated church manual policy on ordaining deaconesses.

CHANGES RECOMMENDED FOR ADVENTIST MEDIA

During its meeting on April 29, the Adventist Media Center (AMC) board reviewed a proposal regarding the future operation of the center as well as media ministries and other services housed there. The proposal calls for the sale of the present AMC property in Simi Valley, Calif., and provides present media ministries such as Voice of Prophecy and It Is Written a 12 to 18-month window to relocate. While this would negate the cost of operating the AMC complex, continued funding from the North American Division (NAD) for the individual media ministries is part of the proposal, as is a commitment to explore new media development possibilities. The AMC board will forward the recommended proposal to the NAD executive committee.

THE RECORD KEEPER TEASER

The teaser trailer for The Record Keeper was released on May 1st. Produced in Portland, Ore., by Walla Walla University alumnus Jason Satterlund, this 11-part web series is being created for The Great Hope project, to tell the story of the Great Controversy from a fresh perspective. The main character, Raina, is an angel tasked with recording the story of the fall of Lucifer and the story is told through the eyes of Caden and Larus, two friends, and angels, caught on different sides. Watch the teaser trailer at <http://bit.ly/15fqShq> and like The Record Keeper on Facebook to follow the project at <http://on.fb.me/16t7uS3>.

FCC OPENS WINDOW FOR LOW POWER FM STATIONS

The FCC has announced they intend to open an application filing window for new low power FM stations in October of 2013. This is a rare opportunity to reach your community that may not arise again due to the scarcity of frequencies available. Low power FM stations are a special class of radio station that operate with a limited range and are only for non-commercial purposes. Donald Martin, an Adventist attorney who specializes in broadcast, media and entertainment law, has prepared a white paper for churches interested in setting up a new station in their area. Download the paper at <http://bit.ly/13msCDI>.

VOICE OF PROPHECY BOARD NAMES NEW LEADER

The Voice of Prophecy Board met Tuesday, April 30 in Simi Valley, Calif., and elected Pastor Shawn Boonstra as the new speaker/director of The Voice of Prophecy. Recently, Pastor Boonstra served as an associate ministerial director at the North American Division. Prior to this assignment, he served for seven years as the speaker/director of It Is Written. Pastor Boonstra has also authored more than 15 outreach-oriented books. He and his wife Jean have two daughters. Pastor Boonstra replaces Pastor Fred Kinsey who served The Voice of Prophecy for five years.
