FEATURES

Allocations

- Construct multiple allocation strategies and evaluate projections for each. In every scenario, users maintain line of sight into the flow of inventory and stock holding across the warehouse and in the store across attributes and all levels of the product hierarchy
- Initiate allocation based on anticipated performance, with the ability to push current channel inventory, incoming purchase orders or stock on hand
- Receive stock, sales and future allocation recommendations
- Manipulate the statistical demand forecast, top-down, middle-out or bottom-up
- Add demand for special events or promotional activity at any level

Demand Forecasting

- Plan strategically, assured that your allocation and replenishment processes will align with the financial plan
- Get demand-driven, best-fit forecasts that accommodate trends, seasonality, lost sales, supersessions, as well as manual adjustments
- Quickly and efficiently adapt to shorter product lifecycles and decreased manufacturing lead times
- Benefit from Amicis' best-in-class forecasting technology and predictive analysis, which ensures that inventory positions are in line with merchandise financial plans

Replenishment

- Account for both the demand forecast and current inventory plan by creating forward-looking, time-phased ordering strategies
- Determine the most cost-effective order quantity based on target service levels
- Apply order constraint to reach value targets, order targets, or to fill up containers
- Avoid poor forecasting outcomes like stockouts, overstocks, product obsolescence and lost sales

Inventory Management

- Benefit from ABC classifications and improved service-level targeting to build the most cost-effective ordering pattern
- Reduce inventory holding and excess stock with smarter forecasts based on true demand, which ultimately drives higher profit margins and lower inventory costs
