Topic outline:
As the world changes, there is one constant truth: only those who adapt can survive. Agility, and a willingness to innovate, are not just useful extras, but central to growth. The great institutions and successful individuals are adaptive for a simple reason: they realise that in a complex world, they don’t already have all the answers. They are therefore not threatened by information about their weaknesses. Indeed, they actively look for them. Matthew also argues that individual intelligence is no longer enough to solve today’s complex problems; to truly succeed we must harness the power of ’cognitive diversity’.

About Matthew
An outstanding motivational speaker, Matthew has worked with some of the world’s leading organisations to build a mindset of continuous improvement.
Using compelling examples from healthcare, aviation, business, education, sport and the criminal justice system, Matthew’s keynote will highlight how to implement a growth culture and the difference this can have on performance – both at an individual level and at an organisational level.
