Global Telecom & Technology (GTT) Extends Its Network Footprint Into Ten CoreSite Data Centers

November 5, 2012

Greater GTT Presence Gives CoreSite's Vertical Ecosystem Communities Expanded Interconnection Opportunities

DENVER, Nov. 05, 2012 /PRNewswire via COMTEX/ --CoreSite Realty Corporation (NYSE: COR), a national provider of powerful, network-rich data centers, today announced that Global Telecom & Technology (GTT) has agreed to extend its backbone network into ten CoreSite data centers. GTT provides one of the world's most extensive networks across North America, Europe, and Asia and this significant upgrade will provide CoreSite customers new opportunities to access diverse business ecosystems through increased interconnection resources.

GTT utilizes its own network assets, including private, optical long-haul networks and highly scalable IP networks, extended through network partners, to provide customers worldwide with innovative connectivity solutions through its Network as a Service proposition. These solutions include Ethernet transport, nLayer IP Transit, cloud connectivity, collaborative networking, and global peering. This expanded relationship with CoreSite gives GTT customers access to CoreSite's extensive mesh of interconnection for the networking and cloud communities and it provides CoreSite's customers access to GTT's increased network footprint resulting in improved solutions for redundancy and resiliency.

As a result of the network upgrade into the new data centers, GTT will peer on Any2, the nation's second largest peering exchange, operated by CoreSite. GTT will also provide seamless access to CoreSite's Open Internet Exchange, including connections to AMS-IX, DE-CIX, and NYIIX through CoreSite locations.

"Providing our customers with diverse, extended interconnection opportunities is critical," said Brian Warren, Vice President of Product Management at CoreSite. "We are building relationships across CoreSite's network-centric computing platform with top network providers such as GTT to bring our customers best-in-class networking solutions."

"We believe that CoreSite provides the optimal, resource to help us extend our network footprint and connect to our customers," said Richard Calder, Jr., GTT President and CEO. "We are pleased to significantly upgrade our presence, reaching CoreSite's growing customer base and robust ecosystems. CoreSite's network-centric computing platform provides the diversity and resiliency that we need to effectively grow our business."
