

Latitude Horizon Fund

Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing return through a selection of non-equity investments.

August Commentary

Governments are rarely compared to start up businesses. Their lack of entrepreneurialism being reasonably well understood.

That said, there is a common thread stitching together the approach taken by successful disruptive businesses of the past and the governments of today. Going for growth.

In “normal times” there is a cost to raise capital (interest rates for governments, and something higher than that for the rest of us) which restricts one’s ability to grow.

However, in a zero interest rate world, businesses with a myopic focus on growth at any cost have been rewarded the most by the markets. Moreover, many have defied their sceptics by creating sustainable business models. In other words, the strategy worked.

Governments are seeking to do the same in a classic overcompensation for the dismal outcome of the austerity politics following the financial crisis. The pandemic has given license to the recent excessive spending, and we know there is nothing so permanent as a temporary government program.

ESG policies give further cover to many new spending initiatives. Subsidies and support for new environmentally friendly projects will drive widening fiscal deficits, as will “social infrastructure” bills and “levelling up” agendas. If only the G stood for improved governance within government itself, then we may be willing to expect a higher return on investment than the failed experiments in money printing and fiscal financing of the past.

Whichever countries are most successful in driving growth in the coming years will likely be rewarded, with higher levels of foreign investment and stronger currencies. This is critical to keeping the underlying rate of inflation at bay, and to maintain the ability to finance growth.

On this basis, Europe is particularly vulnerable. Emerging markets will offer highly dispersed outcomes and the US should be fine, although Biden’s ratings currently suggest otherwise. The UK is a wild card.

Are there opportunities to capitalise on the early exit from the pandemic, as well as Brexit, to drive a growth agenda and massive inward investment, or is the lack of clear policy in government a hindrance? Despite near daily headlines suggesting chaos, we err on the side of optimism.

As we have mentioned before, the relevant conclusion is to expect currency volatility to be high in the coming years. Interest rates, the traditional compass for FX markets, should remain around zero for some time, so relative growth expectations are the driver to watch.

Strategy's Previous Track Record¹ - This is a composite of Freddie Lait's performance in long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Odey Atlas Fund ("Atlas") he managed from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016 during his time at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey") and Latitude Horizon Fund performance data since launch 1 November 2016. The information above and below is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is for the Atlas Fund I share class, net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above and below reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that Atlas Fund changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. In order to show a consistent long term track record for Freddie Lait which is a more accurate representation of how the Latitude Horizon Fund will be managed, the performance of Atlas in the chart above from 23 April 2014 to 31st October 2016 is a carve-out of his actual long only portfolio over this period, which includes his long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
