Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing return through a selection of non-equity investments.

September Commentary

A summary of the risks from inflation, and our defences against it

In the past, easy monetary policy has driven asset inflation, particularly since the financial crisis. The addition of easy fiscal policy, combined with supply chain issues that are being exacerbated by labour shortages, means consumer price inflation is rising rapidly too. Levelling up agendas in the developed world will add further pressure to prices through likely wage-price spirals.

Looking to the future, investors will be judged on their ability to generate returns ahead of inflation over the coming years. A lot of strategies will prove wanting, with many known risks that are already in place being ignored.

First, overpaying for stocks in the face of higher inflation and interest rates is a clear danger. This is the most pressing issue in our opinion. Despite the mainstream commentary to the contrary, our team continue to find companies offering durable and predictable forward growth at very attractive prices. Many of these stocks also benefit from potential inflation and interest rate rallies. Their inclusion thus lowers portfolio risk in two ways: reducing valuation risk (duration) and offering genuine diversity of forward returns.

Second, profit margins are currently at record highs, and will fall as input cost pressures feed through over the coming quarters.

Downward pressure on margins can be seen across the world and slower growth next year will compound things further, as the operational leverage of previous years ceases to be a tailwind. The one offset, is the reduction of "covid expenses" although this feels insufficient to counter much cost inflation.

Finally, "bond proxies" is a term used to describe companies with stable earnings, and also "alternative" investments with steady fixed income-type returns. We believe that the threat of inflation will cause investors to reappraise the relative value of many of these investment solutions, and very few will perform better than inflation-linked government bonds. The latter offer the added benefit of higher liquidity and lower uncertainty too.

We continue to believe that the optimal defence against inflation is a well-diversified, reasonably priced portfolio of large-cap stocks, which offer strong prospects for growth. Including many companies with pricing power, and those which benefit from rising rates and inflation further lowers the risk. Short-dated inflation-linked bonds are still underpricing inflation risk and are a more attractive option at this point to alternative solutions, or even gold. This has been our core asset allocation within the fund for the past couple of years, weathering numerous market environments well. We remain committed to it.

Strategy's Previous Track Record<sup>1</sup> - This is a composite of Freddie Lait's performance in long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Odey Atlas Fund ("Atlas") he managed from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016 during his time at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey") and Latitude Horizon Fund performance data since launch 1 November 2016. The information above and below is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is for the Atlas Fund I share class, net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above and below reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that Atlas Fund changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. In order to show a consistent long term track record for Freddie Lait which is a more accurate representation of how the Latitude Horizon Fund will be managed, the performance of Atlas in the chart above from 23 April 2014 to 31st October 2016 is a carve-out of his actual long only portfolio over this period, which includes his long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
