

Latitude Horizon Fund

Investment Objective

The objective of the Latitude Horizon Fund is to deliver capital appreciation over the long term by holding a concentrated portfolio of stocks, whilst lowering the equity risk and enhancing returns through a selection of non-equity investments.

December Commentary

Liquidity is oxygen for financial markets. Its withdrawal in 2022 led to severe equity and bond market losses, and its surprising reprisal last year led to broad gains.

This is considered surprising because, normally, when interest rates rise as fast as they have, this results in a major reduction in financial liquidity as debt costs rise, and investors sit on cash while it earns higher returns.

The cause of this historic discrepancy is deceptively simple, albeit easier to say that in hindsight. Following the extraordinary money printing during Covid, we saw $2.5tn (trillion!) parked at the Federal Reserve by money market funds, creating a liquidity sponge.

As liquidity elsewhere has dried up, this sponge has been squeezed, as money market funds hoovered up the enormous debt issuance by the government. This liability shifting from the Fed to the government has supported bond prices (lowering interest rates) even as the Fed ran down their balance sheet through continued "QT".

There is still a trillion dollars of liquidity to be released from these funds. A trillion dollars used to be a lot of money, although when the US deficit is -6% of GDP it no longer goes very far. We expect it to be exhausted this year.

As previously mentioned, it is times like these that businesses tend to move in herds, pursuing broadly adopted short-term strategies, and investors crowd into popular investment themes, producing sub-par long-term returns.

It is also times like these that present opportunities for those investors willing and able to take the road less travelled and pursue their own unique path.

Our approach remains constant. We see extraordinary value in our collection of global equities and have, to date, mostly shied away from longer duration bonds, with only a 7% position in 2043 US inflation-linked bonds.

Liquidity will continue to fall, creating a fork in the road for central banks whose action will ultimately determine the path of inflation from here. Volatility is likely to rise and crowded investment themes which worked well last year are likely to suffer the most.

Financial markets are pricing in an investing landscape where a soft landing has been achieved against a sunset of sublime disinflation. While possible, there are many more nefarious scenarios one needs to consider, and protect against, which is why we are positioned as we are.

Strategy's Previous Track Record - This is a composite of performance of long-only global absolute return portfolios principally the Latitude Horizon Fund, which launched on 1 November 2016. Prior to this, from 19 October 2012 to 31 October 2016, the portfolio was managed at Odey Asset Management LLP ("Odey"). The information above is for information purposes, only the Latitude Horizon Fund is being offered for investment. Performance above is net of fees and other charges. Past performance does not guarantee future results and the value of all investments and the income derived therefrom can decrease as well as increase. Investments that have an exposure to currencies other than the base currency of the strategy may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The data above reflects the reinvestment of all interest and dividends received. The Latitude Horizon Fund is a long only UCITS fund managed with similar investment guidelines, using the same investment process and subject to similar fees and charges. For full details always refer to the prospectus. While every effort will be made to manage the Latitude Horizon Fund in the same manner there is no guarantee that there will be similar performance. Note that at Odey the portfolio changed from a long only UCITS fund to a long-short UCITS fund on 23 April 2014. The performance in the chart above, from 23 April 2014 to 31 October 2016, is a carve-out of the actual long only portfolio at Odey, which includes both long only equity and non-equity positions, rebased to cancel out any effects from leverage. Further details on the carve-out are available upon request.
