ABOUT MASSONS

The Masson surname has been synonymous with the Orthotics and Prosthetics industry for over 100 years. The founder of George W. Masson & Sons, George William Masson, was an apprentice splint and surgical instrument maker in the early 1900s in London, England.

1912

George emigrated to Australia, taking up employment in Sydney with a local splint and surgical instrument manufacturing company.

1916

George suffered war injuries from his voluntary service in Gallipoli, Turkey. When he returned to Australia, he was asked to join the Commonwealth Limb Factory in Melbourne.

1930

Lord Nuffield gave a grant to the Melbourne Children's Hospital to build an orthopaedic and prosthetic appliance workshop, which George was invited to supervise.

1937

George continued to supervise the workshop through the polio epidemic and war years.

1946

Upon his eldest son Richard's return from the war, George established the company George W. Masson & Sons. The company manufactured orthopaedic and prosthetic devices for hospitals across Australia.

1975

The driving force of the business evolved from device manufacture to product distribution.

1995

With a vision to provide patients with high quality orthotic and prosthetic services, Anton Karak and Kris Karak formed Orthotics Australia. Over the years, Orthotics Australia grew from a reputable clinical practice to a leader in the use of CAD CAM technology for foot orthotics.

2003

George W. Masson & Sons was acquired by Orthotics Australia. The company changed its name to Massons Healthcare.

2015

Massons Healthcare outgrew its old locations and opened a new headquarters in Knoxfield, Victoria. The company began to sign agreements with international brands to serve as their exclusive distributor for the Asia-Pacific.

2022

Today, Massons Healthcare is an established and growing business ran by Anton and Kris Karak, servicing the majority of prosthetic and orthotic facilities around Australia and many more in the Asia-Pacific. Anton and Kris attribute their ongoing success to their vision to be worldwide industry leaders in technology and product supply with the highest levels of customer service and patient care.
