One of the most frequently asked questions surrounding Peloton is "What is the next piece of equipment that Peloton will release". Based on several interviews, such as this interview with Yahoo finance in September of 2018, we have confirmation the Peloton is working on a third piece of equipment (with the bicycle and Treadmill being the other two). As stated in the article: "Peloton is currently developing a third piece of fitness equipment, although Foley declined to give specifics." Another indicator that Peloton is working on more hardware is that Peloton's new Peloton Studios New York production facility, opened in March of 2020, has four different studios: one for bike, one for tread, one for Yoga, and a mystery fourth studio. Several leaks have pointed to this fourth studio being a rower studio, with 20 Peloton rowers being available

Once you have a Peloton bike, your attention turns to accessories. Whether you think the seat isn't comfortable, or you want a fan to cool off. there are many beneficial accessories you can get. Below, we list some popular and recommended Peloton accessories that can enhance your Peloton experience. GUIDE TO PELOTON CENTURY CLUB SHIRTS

NOTE – In the spring/fall of 2020, there was a several month backlog for shirts. As of 2021, that backlog seems to be back under control and most members seem to be getting their century shirts in a more reasonable time frame.

WHAT IS THE PELOTON CENTURY SHIRT?

A fun program that Peloton has is that once you hit 100 workouts of a certain type (for example, 100 cycling workouts completed), you are eligible for a Peloton Century Club Shirt! Peloton will send you this specially branded tshirt showing that you hit that milestone of 100 workouts, for the low, low cost of FREE! Unfortunately, at this time Peloton does not have any other giveaways for milestones of 200, 300, 500, 1000 or more!

In August 2020, Pelo Buddy launched a weekly podcast that airs live on YouTube and gets distributed via all major podcast platforms (Apple Podcast, Spotify, Google Podcast and 11 others).

Key Takeaways From the 13X Growth of a Peloton Fan Club Case Study:

Peloton understands the value of close-knit engaged communities and facilitates its instructors and users to organize themselves into clusters. In Spring 2020, the brand launched a Tag feature that enables communities to compete in the leaderboards. These small communities revolve around instructors, lifestyles, hobbies, occupations and user locations.

Web – Pelo Buddy, an Independent Website About Peloton, Saw its Traffic Skyrocket in 2020: Pelo Buddy is an "all-about-Peloton" website, that covers recent news, rumours and sells Peloton gear. The website has seen a 13X traffic increase in 2020. Pelo Buddy has an SEO-focused content strategy and leverages buzz keywords and captures organic searches. 83% of Pelo Buddy's web traffic comes from organic search channel. Pelo Buddy recently launched a podcast that airs on YouTube and gets distributed to all major podcast platforms. Almost every episode touches on some instructor-related topics, whether that's rumours about a new coach joining the crew or events from their personal lives.

Organic Social – Instructor Fans Unite in Facebook Private Groups: Cody Rigsby has the largest private Facebook group with 48K members. The community refers to themselves as #BooCrew and shares personal milestones, support and encourages each other to keep going. Group members also discuss other instructors and seek to sell/exchange #BooCrew branded merchandise. Other instructors have slightly smaller Facebook communities with up to 15K members who are also less active (adding up to 10 new posts per day vs. ~100 posts in Cody's group).

Independent Internet – Instructors Host Live Q&A Reddit Sessions: Peloton has a 168K Reddit community that has seen a +168% YoY growth in 2020.
