

About RTP-SEN Foundations

Reporting to Parents – Special Educational Needs (RTP-SEN) Foundations is a two-hour professional learning experience that is designed to introduce the many features of RTP-SEN that enable educators to easily and efficiently plan for and report on students with additional needs.

In RTP-SEN Foundations, participants will be introduced to case studies and illustrations of practice in which educators are successfully using the RTP-SEN online tool to develop consistent and professional documented plans.

The workshop will also demonstrate how RTP-SEN gives schools and educators access to a user friendly tool to make highly professional and usable documented plans that will not only contribute to improved student outcomes but also assist with accountability and communication.

This module is an excellent way to introduce educators at all levels to a user friendly and time saving tool that will allow schools to meet their legislative obligations to students with additional needs.

What is covered in the workshop?

During this workshop, participants will:

- understand the purpose and application of Reporting to Parents - Special Educational Needs (RTP-SEN)
- recognise the benefits of a high-quality student plan for both students and educators
- understand how RTP-SEN is a user-friendly tool for developing student plans
- be guided in the next steps schools and educators can take to utilise RTP-SEN
