| WINE TYPE | White |
| WINE MAKER | Tremayne Smith |

VINEYARD NOTES

The majority of this wine is made of Chenin Blanc, which is sustainably grown in Paarl. The smaller Muscat d'Alexandrie (Hanepoot) portion comes from further east in Slanghoek, while the Semillon is grown in the Swartland.

WINEMAKING NOTES

After the initial pressing, the fermentation is allowed to occur naturally and continues in concrete and stainless steel tanks. Once the primary fermentation is complete the components are blended together and further matured in neutral vessels.

TASTING NOTES

On the nose, the Hanepoot is evident as it lends notes of elderflower and tropical fruit. Bright acidity on the palate really imparts a quenching quality to the wine. The Semillon provides balance and a nice rounded texture on the finish.
