

ISOBEL DANIEL

BA (H) TEXTILE DESIGN

I am a final year textile design student studying at Nottingham Trent University. Specialising in Weave with a genuine interest for interior design for automotive vehicles. My final major project, Chiaroscuro, is a cross disciplinary woven and leather alternative collection for high end automotive interiors. It has been visually inspired by the effects of light and shadows on my everyday surroundings. It is a split collection designed for both commercial cars and a Bond girl concept car. After graduating I hope to further develop my design abilities by continuing to create cutting edge automotive fabrics that inspire and enhance the consumers driving experience
