Oscar managed to crash land the ship in a forest clearing next to a giant, bright blue lake.

The whole side of the ship was destroyed, with Beasties, chunks of boat and cargo, including Oscar's tool box scattered amongst the surrounding trees.

Which posed quite the problem if Oscar wanted to fix his ship. For a start he needed his saw.

Just then, across the lake he spotted a family of Beavers eagerly building a dam.

Oscar had an idea.

Meanwhile, Akky had ended up in the arms of a very large Sasquatch and was screaming his little heart out until he could scream no more.

He quickly discovered that his rather loud reaction was unneeded as the Sasquatch was a friendly one, and had saved him from what would have been a pretty rough landing.

It turned out that this Sasquatch was very shy, which is why people rarely saw her. Her lack of confidence meant she walked around hunched up as she tried to make herself small and hidden.

Akky gently put his head on her shoulder to comfort her. He knew how she felt.

As the pair walked and talked, the Sasquatch started to feel a little better about herself. She didn't often get the chance to talk to anyone, and doing so made her feel brighter.

Not long into their search for Akkys' friends, he began to get a tingling feeling in his hands. He looked as his finger tips began to harden and turn to stone.

He explained to the Sasquatch about the Orbs. She had seen something in the mountains that looked just like what Akky described. She heaved her new friend onto her shoulders and they set off.

Back at the ship Oscar had gathered the crew from various trees and bushes around the crash site and recruited the local Beavers to help fix the ship.

The buck-toothed friendly creatures were happily chewing away at wood and fashioning parts for the boat.

Mimic, who was taking an extended break, spotted something on the Horizon. It was Professor Tsar's ship who had tracked them here. He had to find Akky quickly and make their escape.

He put his walking gear on and marched into the wilderness.
