Oscar and the Beasties had been drifting aimlessly for quite a while. So they decided, after such a long time, to head home to take a break.

It had been a long journey, and with so many of the Beasties now turned to stone, everyone's mood was quite low.

The ship was cruising quietly over the Irish Sea, when Oscar spotted a small island nestled in the middle of Ireland, England and Scotland. So he guided the ship down to take a closer look. Maybe such a distraction could lift everyone's mood.

As the ship approached they spotted a bright red flag flapping in the wind as if waving for them to come closer. The flag had a symbol that looked just like the one on Akky's Orb.

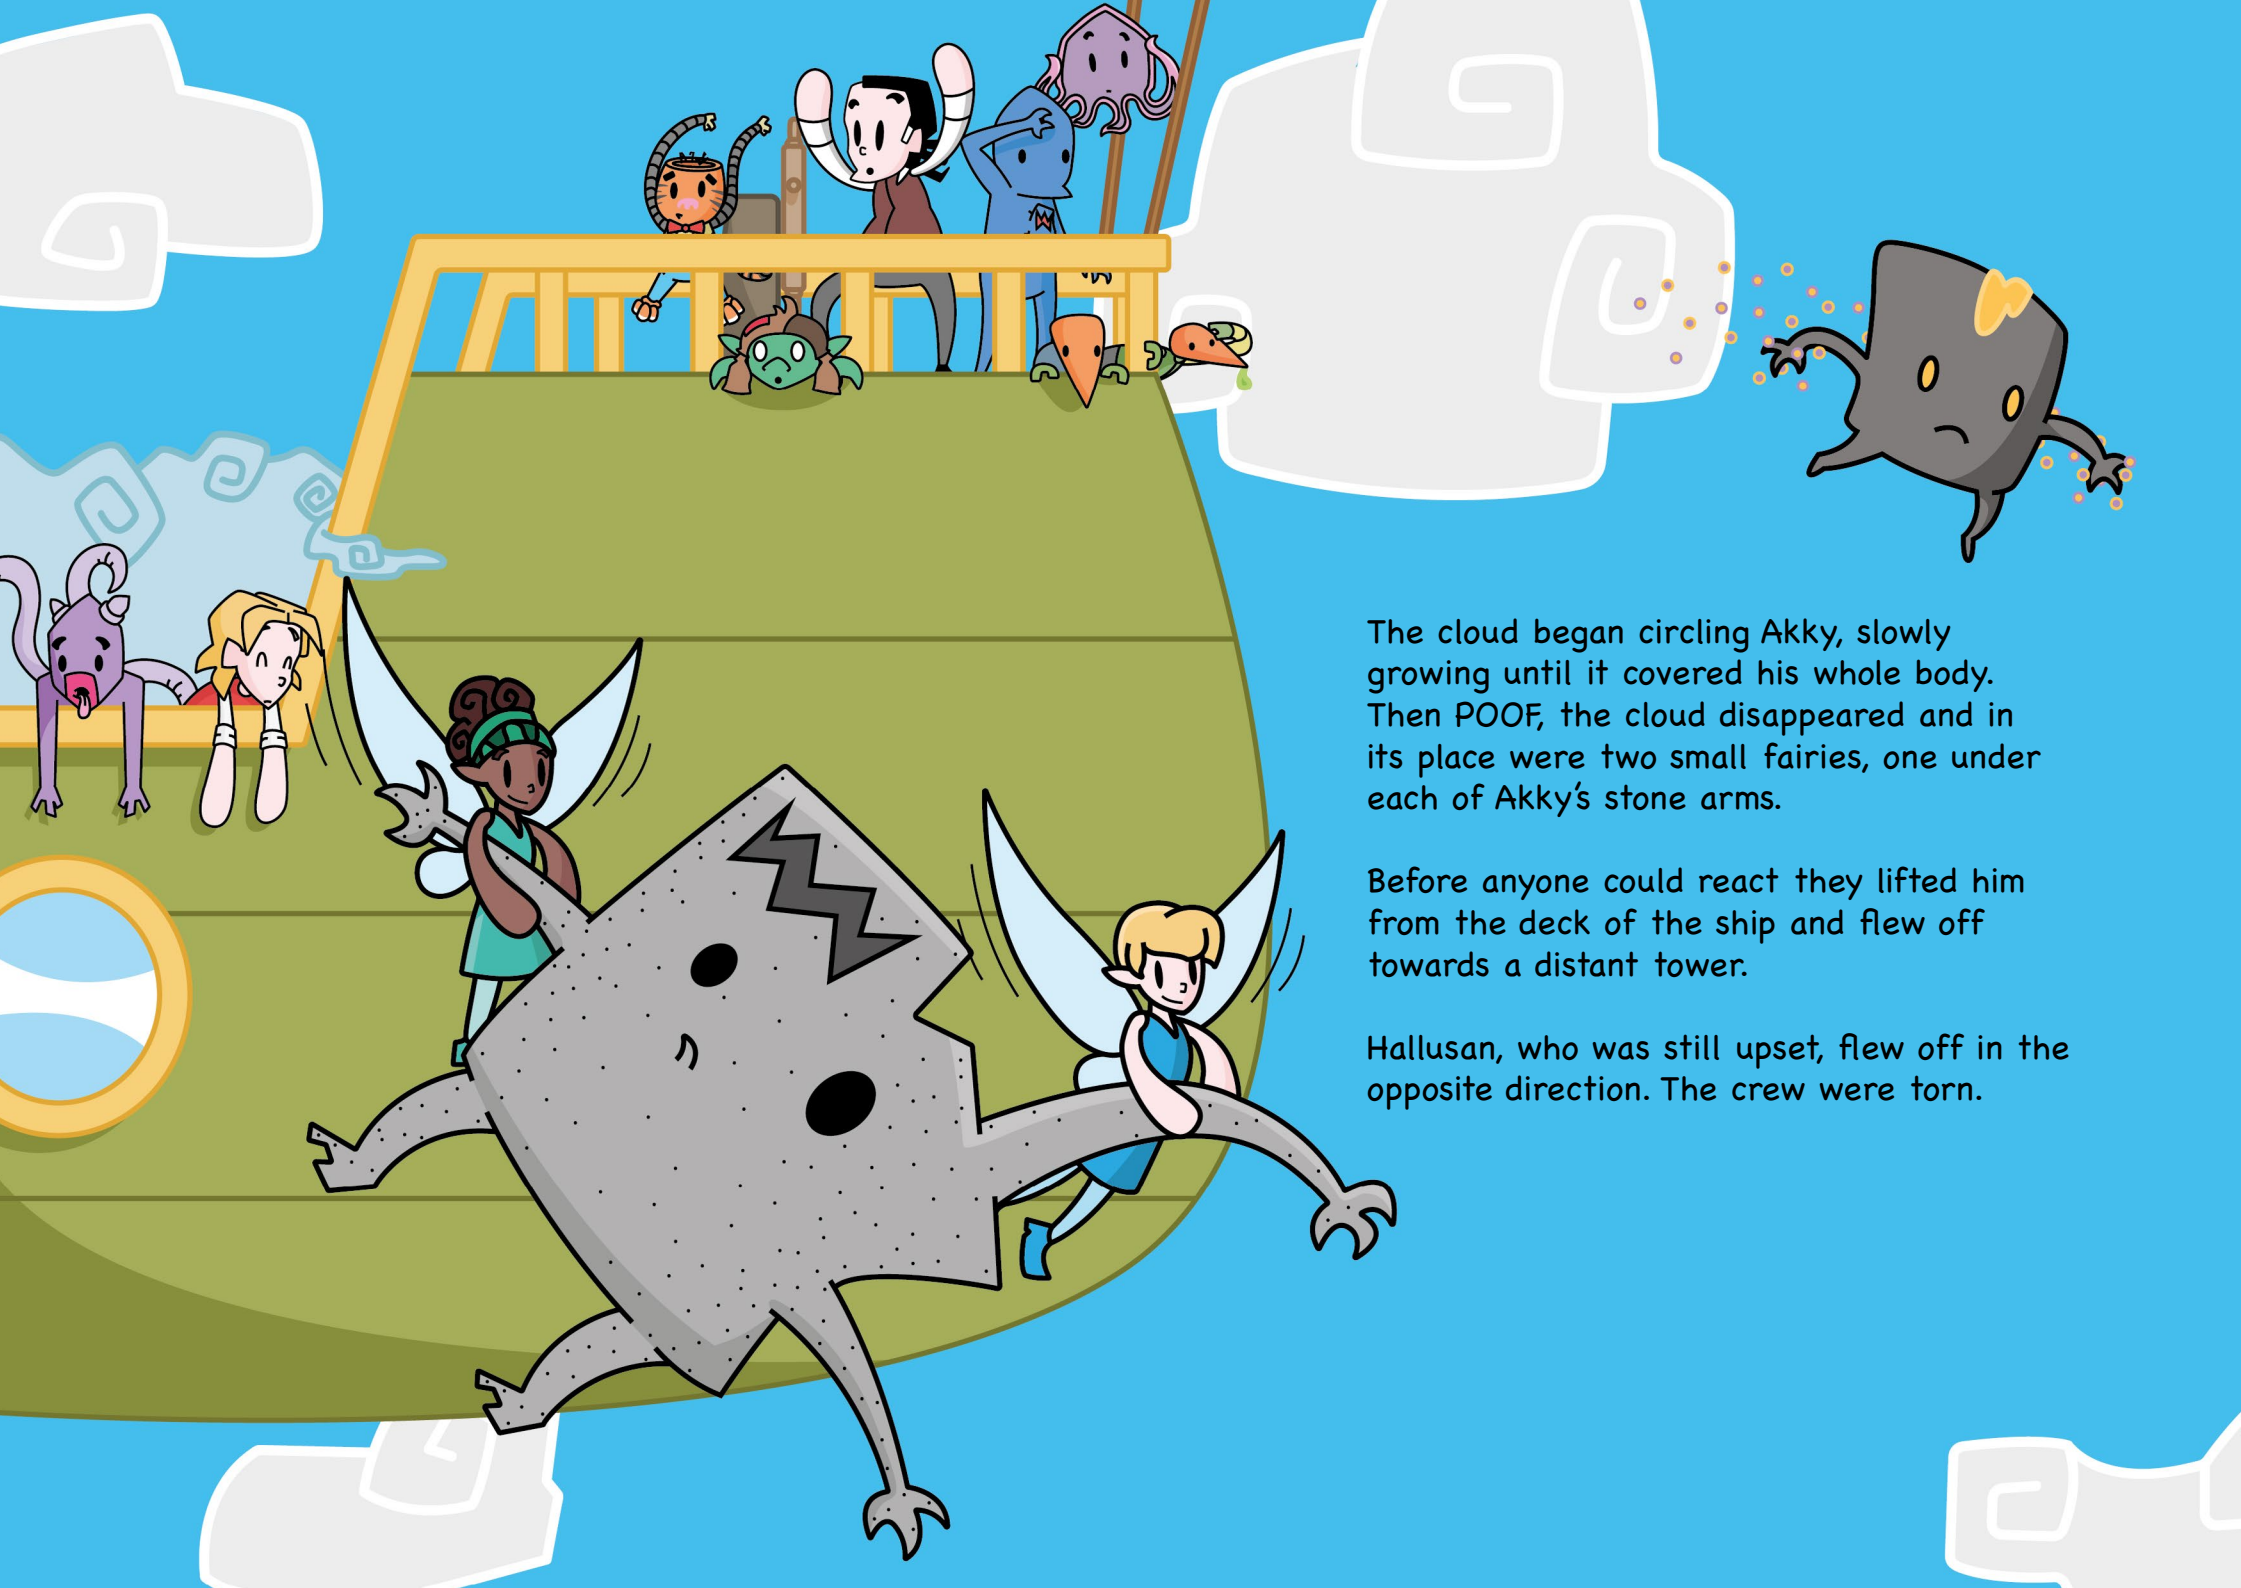

Oscar thought this to be strange, but maybe, just maybe, it was a sign that they could find help here for their friend.

Before Oscar could land, the ship was suddenly surrounded by what looked like glitter. The little sparkly cloud drifted around the deck, stopping at Hallusan, who looked curiously at it. There was something familiar about it that he couldn't quite put his finger on.

The cloud let out a giggling sound and puffed glitter into Hallusan's face before moving on.

Hallusan sneezed and then lowered his head, his feelings hurt.

The cloud began circling Akky, slowly growing until it covered his whole body. Then POOF, the cloud disappeared and in its place were two small fairies, one under each of Akky's stone arms.

Before anyone could react they lifted him from the deck of the ship and flew off towards a distant tower.

Hallusan, who was still upset, flew off in the opposite direction. The crew were torn.
