Course Description

What does it mean for a life to go well? What would it look like for a life to be lived well? In short, what shape would a life worth living take? We will explore these questions through engagement with the lives and visions of founding figures from seven diverse traditions of imagining a good life: the Buddha, the Torah and the Hebrew prophetic and wisdom writers, Jesus of Nazareth, Muhammad, John Stuart Mill, and Friedrich Nietzsche. The course will also feature visits from contemporary individuals who understand their lives to be shaped by the traditions in question.

Course Questions

a. To whom or what are we responsible for living our lives a certain way?
b. What is a human being and what is their place in the world?
c. What does it mean for life:
   i. to feel good? (And does it matter? Might the life worth living be miserable?)
   ii. to go well? What is important in terms of life’s circumstances?
   iii. to be led well? What do we need to do in order to lead a life worth living?
d. What is the role of suffering in a good life? How should we respond to suffering, our own and others’?
e. What should we do when we fail to live a good life?

Admission to the Course

Enrollment for this course is managed through Preference Selection. Pre-registration will open Friday, December 6, 2019 and close Wednesday, January 8, 2019 at 5pm. Notice of assignments will be available on January 10, at 5pm.

While preference may be given to students who have taken HUMS 065, admission to the course is otherwise by lottery. Students assigned a spot in a seminar will forfeit that spot if they miss a class without notifying their instructor in advance. Students not selected by the lottery who still want to take the course will need to attend the seminar meeting(s) of their choice in order to be placed on a waiting list and will need to continuing attending a given seminar’s meetings in order to keep their spot on that seminar’s waiting list.

Assignments and Evaluation

All written assignments should be submitted in pdf format via Canvas assignments. Late papers will receive a grade reduction of one step (e.g., from A- to B+) for each day or part of a day that they are late. Late reading responses and discussion questions will not be graded and will count as a score of zero for calculation of the final grade.

1. 750 word (maximum) paper analyzing the vision(s) of a life worth living that the Yale community advocates or implicitly endorses. Due February 15 by 11:59pm. (20 percent of final grade)

2. 1000 word (maximum) paper analyzing the vision(s) of a life worth living that your peers (a) espouse and (b) adhere to de facto. The espoused vision and the adhered-to vision may or may not be the same. Specify which set of peers (e.g., college classmates, young adults in a particular culture or subculture, etc.) you will discuss. Due March 28 by 11:59pm. (20 percent of final grade)

3. 1250 word (maximum) paper outlining your own personal vision of a life worth living. Draft due April 20/21 by 11:59pm. Final draft due by the end of reading period. (20 percent of final grade)

4. 2-minute presentation commending your own personal vision of a life worth living. To be presented in class during your seminar's last meeting. You will work on developing this presentation with assistance from communication coaches during the last three weeks of the semester. You will meet twice in a small group with your communication coach (meeting times to be arranged later in the semester). (10 percent of final grade)

5. One purpose of a seminar like this one is to provide the opportunity for dialogical learning, not only between students and faculty, but also among students. Consequently, the quality of your participation in class greatly influences the relative success or failure of this course. Accordingly, your participation will be assessed. (20 percent of final grade) But since the goal is a flourishing seminar, not a competition for “participation points,” participation cannot be reduced to “saying smart things frequently.” Please put some thought into how you contribute to the seminar environment. Bear the following in mind. (1) Quality matters more than quantity. (A few moments of silence spent thinking things through is nothing to be afraid of.) (2) Charity counts for more than cleverness. Scoring points at another’s expense is not to be smiled upon. (3) Listening should demand more of your attention than talking. You are here primarily to learn, not to perform. Wondering how you might participate fruitfully in seminar? Consider these examples:
   a. Ask a question or make a comment that shows you are interested in what another person says.
   b. Ask a question or make a comment that encourages another person to elaborate on something they have already said.
   c. Take notes when your classmates speak, so you can remember their contributions and formulate good questions and comments in response.
   d. Make a comment that underscores the link between two people’s contributions.
   e. Make a comment that summarizes our conversation so far and/or suggests new direction and questions to be explored in the future.
   f. Make a comment indicating that you found another person’s ideas interesting or useful.
   g. Contribute something that builds on, or springs from, what someone else has said.
   h. Find a way to express appreciation for the insight you have gained from the discussion.

In order to help monitor this crucial component of the course, you will submit weekly self-assessments of seminar preparation and participation.
NB: There will be an all-day course retreat Saturday, February 1, 2020. While accommodations will be made for student unable to attend due to religious commitments, otherwise participation in the course retreat is expected of all students. (Students in previous years have described the retreat as a highlight of the course as a whole!)

Course Policies

Use of laptops, tablets, and phones will not be permitted at any time during the seminar sessions, except with prior permission from the instructor.

Attendance at all seminar and lecture meetings is expected except in case of emergencies. Unexcused absences from the seminar will result in a reduction of the final course grade.

Readings

To facilitate conversation that will often involve close readings of assigned texts, every student needs a physical copy of each seminar reading with them in class. Because laptops are not allowed in seminar, printing readings from Canvas before class is required (cost of printing readings double-sided totals to approximately $50 over the course of the semester).
