

1: Counter (major outer wheel) o-soto-guruma to (major outer reap) o-soto-gari.

Uke attacks you with (major outer wheel) o-soto-guruma by taking a step forward to your right with his left foot at the same time uke's right hand grip on your left lapel is driven backwards and uke's left hand grip on your right sleeve (at the elbow) is pulling out and down forcing you off balance.

You counter the attack by taking a little step slightly out, backwards and stiffening your stance in the legs, with your left leg used as a strong post, so uke is unable to reap out both of your legs, start to lean forward, against uke drive. Using your right arm as the power of defense by locking it, start to drive uke in a backward motion and at the same time use the back of your right leg to reap out uke's right leg from underneath him and continue to drive him to his rear corner (right side). Countering uke's attack with (major outer reap) o-soto-gari.

2: Counter (major outer wheel) o-soto-guruma to (major outer wheel) o-soto-guruma.

Uke attacks you with (major outer wheel) o-soto-guruma. You counter the attack by taking a little step slightly out, backwards and stiffening your stance in the legs, with your left leg used as a strong post, (so uke is unable to reap out both of your legs). push uke back just a Little then start to lean forward, against uke's drive, moving your weight in the same direction. Use your right arm as the power of defense by locking it, start to drive your right leg (stretch out across the back of both ukes legs) and by using the back of your right leg to reap out both of uke's legs in a backward motion, countering with (major outer wheel throw) o-soto- guruma.

3: Counter (major outer wheel) o-soto-guruma to (minor outer hook) ko-soto-gake.

Uke attacks you with (major outer wheel). O-soto-guruma. You counter the attack by taking a step backwards with your right leg, stiffening your stance in the legs, with your right leg used as a strong post, (so uke is unable to reap out both of your legs), push uke back just a little. Start to lean forward, against uke's drive, Use your left leg to hook out behind ukes right leg moving your weight in the same direction. Use your right arm as the power of defense by locking it, and your left-hand grip pulling on uke's right elbow you then start to drive your left foot to hook uke's right leg from behind counter by using your counter of (minor outer hook) ko-soto-gake.
