FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NV Attorney Joey Gilbert sues Gov. Sisolak again over unconstitutional emergency orders

Nevada-based lawyer and community champion responds to a business outcry by filing a lawsuit against Nevada Governor Steve Sisolak requesting an immediate reversal of the permanent emergency regulation.

RENO, Nev. (December 1, 2020) – A formal lawsuit was filed on November 20, 2020, stemming from community response against the permanent emergency regulations enacted and signed by Gov. Steve Sisolak in March 2020. The complaint states that the Governor’s ongoing actions violate the separation of powers doctrine imbedded in the Nevada Constitution and asks for a temporary restraining order from enforcing unlawful emergency orders.

The suit is a collective effort initiated by Joey Gilbert, a Nevada Based attorney and the Plaintiffs Central Cinema of Ely, Inc. in White Pine Nevada, who retained Gilbert in November. The filing states that the Nevada State Constitution prohibits the State’s Governor, Steve Sisolak, from exercising legislative power as a response due to the COVID-19 Pandemic.

“I have applied to a temporary restraining order and preliminary and permanent injunction and declaration relief, prohibiting any type of unlawful enforcement of Governor Sisolak and the State of Nevada,” Gilbert said. “It’s the governor’s gross abuse of power that is continuing to cause great harm to the livelihood and security of individuals, families, and businesses across our state.”

Joey Gilbert, Nevada attorney, entrepreneur, former prize-fighter, also known for his appearance on The Contender (2005), openly challenged Nevada state Governor Steve Sisolak this past March to amend the order banning the restrictions on Hydroxychloroquine in the state of Nevada. Joey Gilbert recently also filed a civil rights complaint about damages and injunctive and declaratory relief on behalf of Calvary Chapel White Pine.
