CAREER

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

POSITIONING AND MOVEMENT

He wins many duels in his interpretation of space-time. He always seeking to appear as a "free man" on the weak side and be able to keep the possession. He handles good concepts to give continuity to the play. This is supported by a technical capacity that allows him to be dynamic in all the zones of the pitch. He offers complete and intelligent movements per band generating superiorities.

CLEARANCES AND ANTICIPATIONS

He dominates interceptions at close range. He manages to win the duel against the rival from his physique, where he possesses aptitudes above the average of the position and his generation, as well as his defensive concepts. He does not usually run long distances, preferring using his timing and maintaining the defensive tactical order.

SOLVING UNDER PRESSURE

In situations of high pressure, he is a player who has an outstanding problem-solving capacity, which ranges from his offensive 1v1 with dribbling, to his associating criteria to start playing from the bottom. In addition, he is serene and constantly visualizing his environment to decide correctly through his executions. Unlike the typical full-back of his age, he prioritizes possession and restarts when necessary.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

VERTICAL PASSES

Shows great development in his vertical passes to break lines; At a technical level, they stand out for their strength, direction and fast execution (it does not require much time and space to associate), while at a tactical level they always offer advantages to the receiver, measuring very well the continuity of the play in favor of the collective attack. It can also be shown on inside lanes to offer support in numerical superiorities.

DEFENSIVE SUPPORT

He has an offensive DNA that makes him go constantly into attack. In addition, it is supported by the team's automatism. From there, he can overcome through speed by sideline, look for the diagonal run and the cross into the box or activate the associative circuit from the middle of the field. He has a considerable level of unpredictability in its decisions and can load the area if necessary.

LONG PASSES

He frequently makes long passes, always looking for connecting with the opposing side behind the back of the last line or looking for the centre forward, which also allows other players to look for the second play and settle on rival field. These passes can also be made by crossing into the area, trying to take advantage of the use of grid 15.
