TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Positioning

Formiliano's defensive location on the field stands out. He understands where he has to be at, which allows him to defend easier and not move too far from his position. It helps him recover many balls with a tiny effort.

Breaking-line passes

Formiliano frequently makes breaking-line passes. He has a great pass quality, accomplishing breaking-line passes and leaving rivals behind. He has vision of play to find out midfielders and attackers by passes on the ground and straight to their feet.

Aerial play

His height and strength promote how good he is at the aerial play. His positioning is important when analyzing this aspect. He has a good jumping technique to hit both frontal and lateral balls. It also makes him an important player for set pieces.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Coverages

Again, we analyze his focus on positioning to take care of teammate's back, even when protecting the opposing fullback or centre-back. He arrives in tackles well, through his speed and strength. He does not need to slide to tackle.

Strenght at defensive 1v1

He is a player with good defensive 1v1 technique. He uses his body to overcome the rival and win the possession. He positions in front of the ball well. Once he recovers, he passes to the closest teammate to try advancing.

Anticipations

Formiliano is a footballer with anticipation technique, mostly for frontal balls. He holds the rival's striker until the last second and then tries to recover the ball. He tries it quick, looking for an oriented deflection to build-up from the back.
