

Case study

RexBrown launch Mattel on eBay UK.

With 300 SKUs in just one month using Linnworks for listing, order management and inventory management.

Find out how Linnworks can grow your business.
Book a demo at www.linnworks.com/demo

The challenge.

Fuelled by ecommerce acceleration in 2020, marketplaces have become a critical path for brands to reach their customers everywhere they spend time shopping online.

However, for established brands who have built their business around brick and mortar channel sales, adapting to the unique requirements of selling through marketplaces is easier said than done.

Individual marketplaces have nuanced requirements, inventory management and warehouse logistics require the right setup in order to meet the expectations of modern multichannel shoppers which proves to be a barrier to entry for many brands.

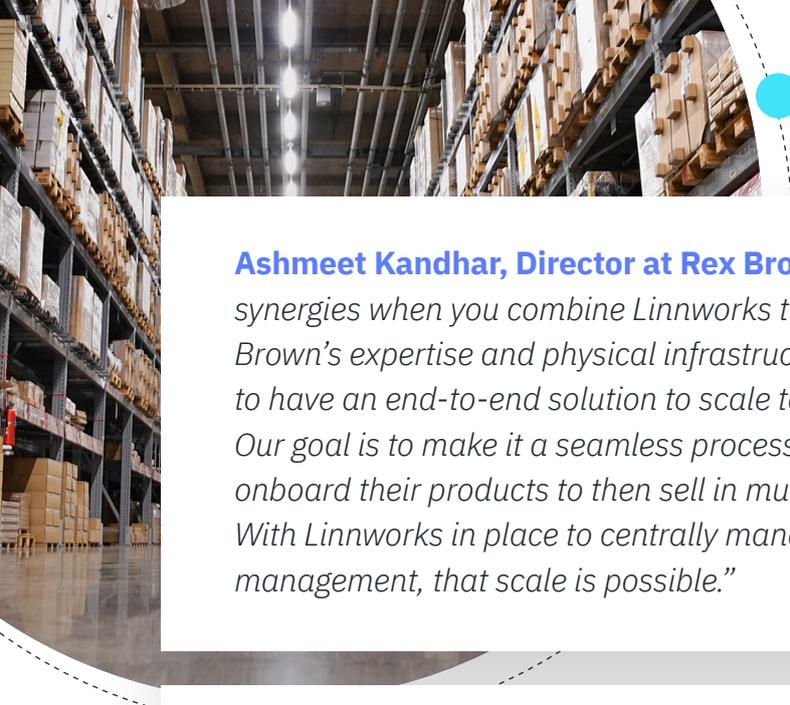

Since 2006, Rex Brown has partnered with brands such as Unilever, L’Oreal and Mattel taking the first steps to develop a presence on key marketplaces. Acting as an agile extension of its customers’ business and taking on the heavy lifting of integrations, listing and optimization, Rex Brown offers an end-to-end service to manage marketplace listing and order management through to warehouse management and fulfillment.

Seeing early results from key marketplaces including Amazon and eBay, Rex Brown’s customers such as Mattel were keen to scale to sell on multiple platforms which became a time consuming task for large brands with a high volume of SKUs and caused challenges with inventory management and order processing.

David Ros Hernández, Ecommerce New Business Lead EMEA at Mattel Inc, says:

“we started collaborating with RexBrown in August 2020. RexBrown partnered with Linnworks, and in just one month Mattel was launched on eBay UK with 300 listings, providing a clear path for global brands such as Mattel to leverage the opportunity of selling through global marketplaces.”

Ashmeet Kandhar, Director at Rex Brown, says: “there are clear synergies when you combine Linnworks technical capabilities with Rex Brown’s expertise and physical infrastructure which enables brands to have an end-to-end solution to scale to multiple marketplaces. Our goal is to make it a seamless process for any company, small or large, to onboard their products to then sell in multiple verticals, channels and countries. With Linnworks in place to centrally manage multichannel inventory and order management, that scale is possible.”

Suleman Mehar, Head of Acquisition, eBay UK, says: “with traditional retail channels disrupted, it’s great to see so many brands maximizing their ecommerce offering and embracing a wider audience of online customers. Using Linnworks and Rex Brown, brands who do not have a direct to consumer offering can access eBay’s market of nearly 30 million UK shoppers per month.”

Featured Solutions

Stock Control

Multichannel Listing

Inventory Management

Order Management

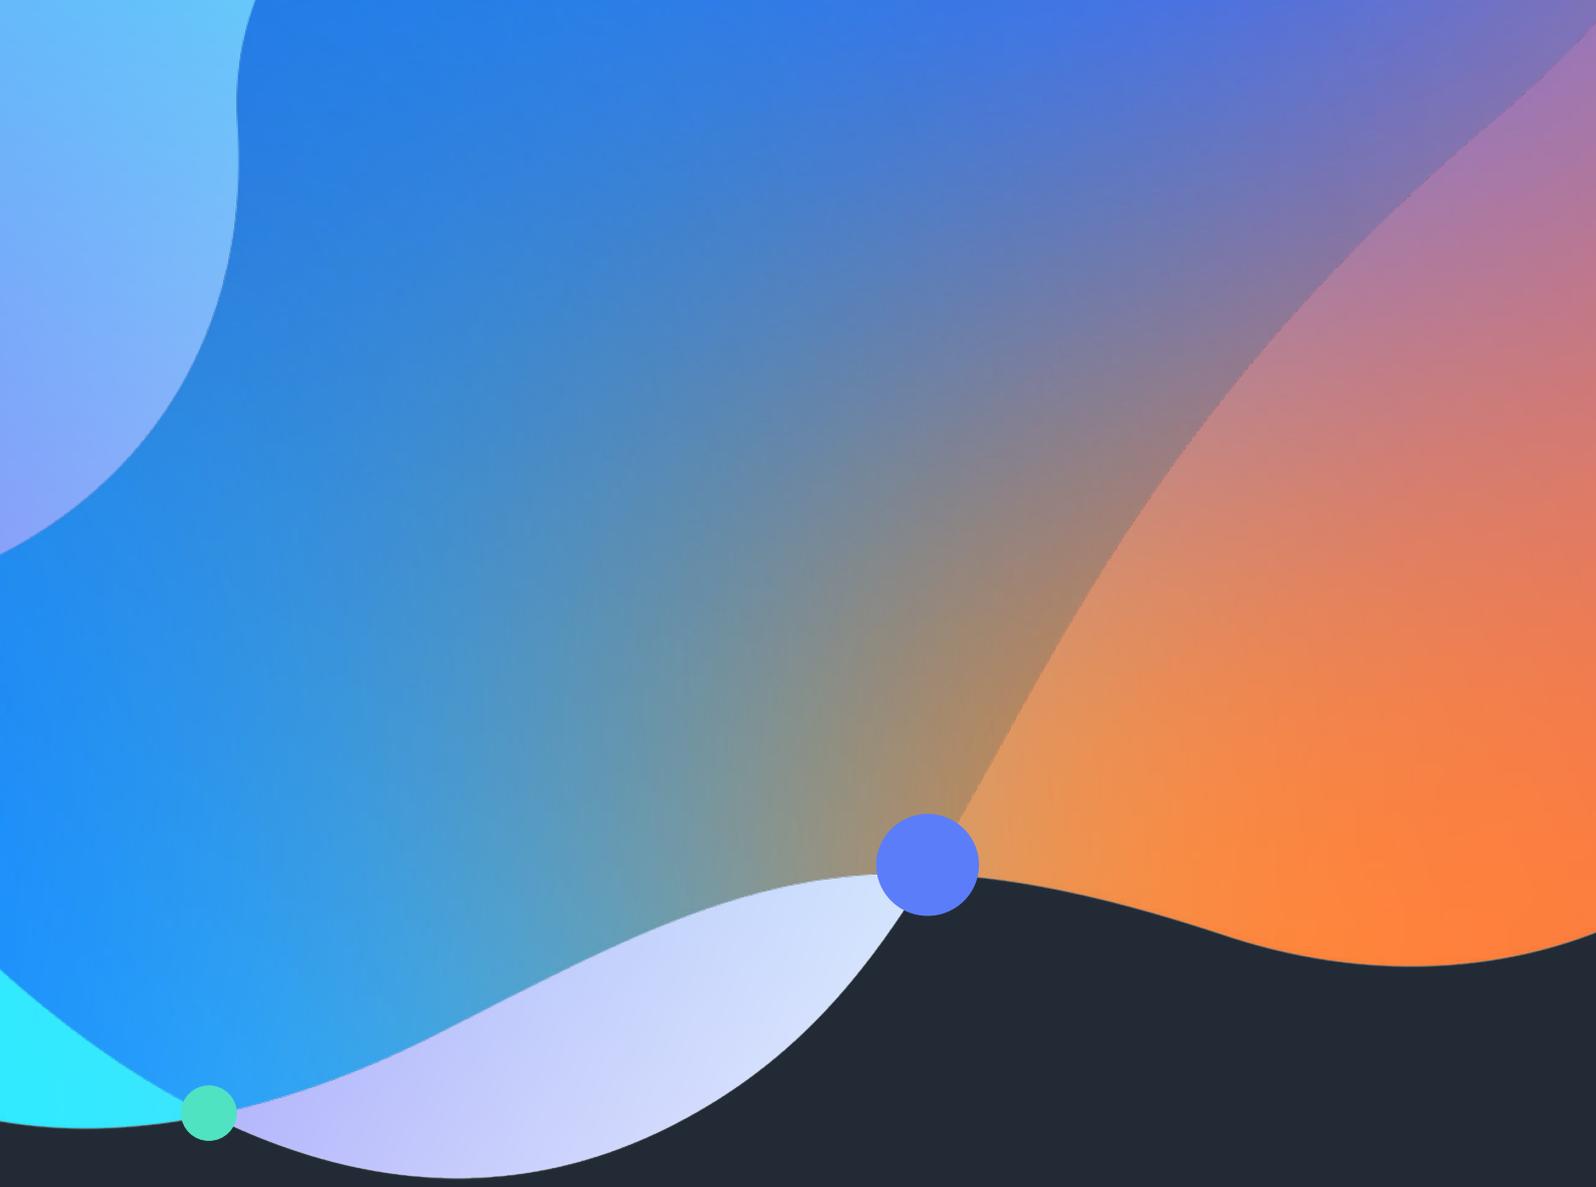

Shipping

Insights

Linnworks and Rex Brown offer a full technical and physical solution for brands growing their multichannel ecommerce business:

- Greater control over routes to market
- Ability to scale efficiently to new marketplaces with an increased number of SKUs
- Automated processes acting as an agile extension of clients’ business
- Helping brands to build and protect their presence on key market places to engage with shoppers, wherever they spend time online
- Expanding to new marketplaces is a seamless process with bulk listing, inventory management and order management centralized in Linnworks.

Find out how Linnworks can grow your business.
Book a demo at www.linnworks.com/demo