Instructions and Sample: Copyright Page

If you decide to include a copyright notice in your thesis, it should be placed on a separate Copyright Page. According to the seminary's Format Guidelines, the Copyright Page should follow the title page of your thesis. In other words, Turabian's instructions for the order of these pages should not be followed, but for the format of the Copyright Page, Turabian, 9th ed., 388–389, should be followed. This notice legally establishes your copyright.

For additional information on copyright law, please see the article "Copyright and Your Dissertation or Thesis: Ownership, Fair Use, and Your Rights and Responsibilities." You may also want to consult the helpful discussion of rights, permissions, and copyright in The Chicago Manual, 17th ed., chapter 4. Please especially note what this chapter says about the limits of fair use (210–214) and the procedure for requesting permission (214–218).

If you have questions about this element of your thesis, please email ctw@wts.edu.

Please see the next page for a sample of this element.

Leave a 1-1/2" left-hand margin.
