Month after month, there seems to be an item reported to the LHH City Council that involves the La Habra Heights Fire Department (LHHFD).

Month after month, such reports are always positive indications of the professionalism of that department.

At our last council meeting, for instance, we learned that LHHFD has been selected by California Office of Emergency Services (Cal OES) to house one of their fire trucks—one that happens to be set up to fight brush fires. It will be operated by our firefighters and be available for use by the city, and it can also be called on for service elsewhere in the state. Cal OES could have assigned this fire engine anywhere it wanted, but LHHFD was the department chosen.

As a department participating in mutual aid with surrounding departments, LHHFD is frequently called upon to support others in emergency situations. If our department weren't highly competent, others wouldn't come to them time and again for assistance. LHHFD has deployed several times in the past year to join others fighting brush fires in various parts of the state. In my thinking, if LHHFD weren't as good as it apparently is, other departments wouldn't be so trusting and ready to call on them.

What's also impressive to me is how often LHHFD has been selected to receive grants, which this fiscal year alone have totaled hundreds of thousands of dollars.

LHHFD has a compensated staff, but it is also host to a number of volunteers already trained in firefighting but in need of experience to become full-time, compensated firefighters in other departments. In a sense, they are saying: "We know where we can receive quality training and experience: at La Habra Heights Fire Department." Even paramedics serving the Heights are supervised under the auspices of a UCLA program.

Last month, the LHH City Council approved fulltime positions for three fire captains. These people have had careers with other departments and, like the volunteers, have chosen to serve with LHHFD. I can only imagine the experience and wisdom they bring to their jobs. If I were new to firefighting, I would certainly welcome the opportunity to spend my workdays with such incredible mentors.

It remains for me to thank the leader who has done so much to make this happen: LHH Fire Chief Doug Graft. His leadership has helped create a fire department ready for challenges both today and in the future.

I hope Heights residents will show appreciation to our firefighters and paramedics without flames being nearby. Many of you have recently had the chance to do so, since LHHFD personnel have provided COVID-19 vaccinations, as well as transportation for residents to receive vaccinations. The goodness of this department has no end.

—Dennis Laherty

Congratulations to the winners of our annual LHHIA Photo Contest (see pages 8 and 9). The entries were especially good this year, and the voting was very close. In addition to the winners, many of the entered photos will likely appear in future issues of Heights Life.

Congratulations as well to our Class of 2021 graduates honored on pages 10 and 11. We'll be featuring more graduates in the July issue of Heights Life (see the invitation on page 4).

Music in The Park update: We have tentatively booked four bands for Music in The Park concerts in late July and early August, contingent on our ability to comply with updated state, county and city Covid-19 guidelines, which we hope to receive by mid-June. Watch lhia.com, Heights Life and Guac Talk, and we'll let you know as soon as we receive the necessary guidance.

Annual General Meeting on September 1: Because of ongoing uncertainties related to the pandemic, the LHHIA Board of Directors postponed our organization's Annual General Meeting and Election to Wednesday, September 1, 2021. Please save that date. We hope that restrictions on public gatherings will have eased sufficiently by that time that we will be able to hold the meeting at La Habra Heights City Hall. Watch Heights Life and lhia.com for updates and details.

Our thanks to Jane Noltensmeier: On June 30, Jane Noltensmeier will be leaving the LHHIA Board of Directors after nearly a decade of service to the organization and Heights community, including two years as LHHIA president. At our meeting on May 12, the board expressed gratitude for Jane's numerous contributions and presented her a special gift.

Jane co-edited Heights Life along with Vicki Cooke for three years, then joined the LHHIA board and served for six years, during which she was chairperson of Welcome Wagon and an active participant in all our annual and special events each year. We wish Jane all the best, and we'll welcome her continued involvement in LHHIA activities.

Gary Dominguez, former LHH Fire Chief, passes away

Gary Dominguez, 61, who served as Fire Chief of the La Habra Heights Fire Department from September 1, 2010, through March 22, 2012, passed away peacefully at his home on May 5 from brain cancer.

Fire Chief Doug Graft issued the following statement: "Chief Dominguez came to the LHHFD after a full career at the Fullerton Fire Department, all the while training countless young firefighters at the Santa Ana College Fire Academy. We extend our deepest condolences to the Dominguez family." The City Council and staff added their condolences.

Chief Dominguez began teaching at the Santa Ana College Fire Academy in 1985 and instructed 122 fire academies and thousands of firefighters over the next 34 years. He simultaneously served the Fullerton Fire Department for 29 years, retiring in 2010 as the Division Chief responsible for operations. He was interim Fullerton Fire Chief in 2005.

He is survived by his wife Suzie, son Gary, daughters Amy and Kristina, sister Arlene and their families.

Garden Plot

In every gardener there is a child who believes in the seed fairy.

— ROBERT BRAULT

By Beverley Lepak, Horticulturist & Landscape Consultant

Add these to your culinary collection: borage (attracts bees, and its edible flowers have a light cucumber taste), caraway, chamomile, French tarragon, garden sage, oregano, parsley, salad burnet, sorrel and summer savory. Time for thyme? Try caraway, lemon, nutmeg, and orange varieties. Not all types of thyme are used for cooking; some are ornamental, so check the label!

SUMMER BLOOMS

Attract those all-important pollinators! Plant ageratum, black-eyed Susans, celosia, cosmos, coreopsis, dahlia, gaillardia, hollyhocks, lobelia, marigolds, petunias, salvia, snapdragons, sunflowers, vinca and zinnias.

For shady and part-shade areas, plant bromeliads, begonia (both bedding and tuberous), caladium, coleus, fuchsia, impatiens, New Guinea impatiens and polka-dots (hypoestes).

JUNE CHECKLIST

Unfortunately, we're in the midst of another drought. Check irrigation lines for leaks and adjust timers if needed. Mulch where you want to protect root systems and reduce weeds. Deeply water large trees and shrubs at least once a month over the summer, and water succulents and cacti a little. Some California native plants will start to go "summer dormant" around the end of June; lightly irrigating them is ok, but don't overwater them later in the summer.

Hungry critters will find your fruit and foliage irresistible! Fencing can help keep out those gophers, moles, squirrels and rabbits, but some will surely find ways into your garden. You may need to use additional methods to keep them under control.

"June drop": Some fruit trees will drop small and undeveloped fruits. This a natural process if a tree has too many fruits for the crop to develop fully. Trim off any non-producing branches and water sprouts to help healthier fruit ripen. Water fruit on a regular schedule and pick up and dispose of any rotting fruit.

We really need to keep up on brush clearance and trim along roadsides as the weather gets hotter and fire season worsens!

Happy Father's Day, and congrats to all our grads!

THE SUMMER SOLSTICE, the first day of summer, will arrive on Sunday, June 20, at 8:31 p.m. Surprise dad for Father's Day (also June 20) by having the kids clean up the "grill station," transplant some yummy herbs in pots and place them near the BBQ for the chef!

We can enjoy outdoor gatherings with longer daylight hours and warmer weather. Keep the kids busy with summer gardening projects. Plant a summer garden. Make a corn or sunflower maze. Plant a butterfly garden—and be sure to include milkweed for monarch butterflies. Have the kids keep a garden log so they can track germination rates, identify insects and see how long it takes until harvest time. Make or purchase a bird bath and feeders for hummingbirds.

SUMMER VEGETABLES & HERBS

Harvest the last of your late-season spring vegetables and plant or sow seeds of beans, beets, corn, cucumbers, eggplant, endive, kale, lima beans, peppers, pumpkins, melons, okra, radishes, sweet potatoes, Swiss chard, summer squash, tomatoes and zucchini.

It's basil season! Sow seeds of different varieties: clove, large green, lemon, licorice, Genovese, Greek, mammoth and Thai, among many more. Sow in two-week intervals and pinch off flowers to keep the foliage full and flavorful.

Although it's rare, we occasionally have one person receive multiple prizes in our annual LHHIA Photo Contest. It happens in part because the voting process is "blind"—i.e., judges see only randomly-numbered photos and do not know names of individual photographers until after results are tabulated. This year, Patty Kraikittikun-Phuong received enough votes in a very close race to win both first and second. See her first-place winner on this month's cover; her second-place entry is shown below. Patty is obviously fond of Heights wildlife! The LHHIA Board of Directors, which judged the contest, sincerely thanks her and everyone who participated.

SECOND PLACE • Patty Kraikittikun-Phuong

THIRD PLACE •

Jodee Morgan, our third-place winner, has won first, second and third prizes in past contests. Jodee has been very active in Highland Riders for many years, and her portrait of a young rider is one of literally thousands of equestrian shots she has taken. Her photo below reminds us of better pre-Covid times when horse shows took place at The Park, and we're all hopeful that such community-building activities will soon resume.

Seann Hogan, who received an Honorable Mention from the judges, captured the essence of a lovely Heights evening with his view of the moon and city lights below. His photo reminds us why we cherish our "dark skies."

Watch future Heights Life issues, because we plan to publish as many of our remaining entries as possible. Please remember that you don't have to wait until contest-time to send your photographs to Heights Life—we appreciate receiving them all year long, and we'll still be happy to enter them in our next contest! Just email them to heightslifeeditor@gmail.com.
