Our Process

Cabinet building begins long before we take precise measurements, fire up our saws and start cutting lumber. It begins when a customer decides they want a new kitchen or custom cabinetry piece. Our first step is to help you get your ideas down on paper and into a comprehensive design. We start by asking you a few questions to find out what layout best fits your needs. We try and find out what style cabinetry you like best. We show you a gallery of our finishes, or help you find a way to duplicate that color you found in your favorite home magazine or that matches your dining room table perfectly. We'll invite you to our showroom to pick your favorite hardware. We find out if you like flush cabinets or raised cabinets. What kind of sink do you like? Do you want soft closing drawers?

We ask as many questions as it takes to help you get the most out of your investment. We allot as much time up front as it takes to learn your expectations. At this point, we hand-create comprehensive layout plans for your approval and make changes as needed to suit your demands. When everything is approved, we'll provide you with an estimate to complete work. After we bring your kitchen to life in our workshop, we'll work with any other contractors on your project to coordinate our installation and how it fits in your or their timeline. When your kitchen is finished, all you have to do is enjoy it. We'll handle all the stress that can be a part of a design or renovation so you don't have to.
