ABOUT

ARK is a creative event and production company. In 2021 we have had the opportunity of converting a 200m² warehouse that dates back to WW1 into an arts, studio and events space called 'The Old Joinery'.

The Old Joinery is a blank canvas for creative projects situated in Greenwich Village. The pop up space will run into 2021, in that time we are looking to work with a wide range of events and projects.

The skills of the team combined with the 200m² space leaves us open to accommodating a range of ideas. Theatre, art exhibitions, filming, photo shoots, pop up restaurants, events and anything in between.

Between the team at The Old Joinery we have 50 years' experience within the events and production industry, this knowledge will be used to accommodate and transform the rough and ready space to the needs of visiting projects.

The Old Joinery is not just a space but partners in making visiting projects a success and our attitude to accommodating and facilitating these projects will reflect that.

Within the space we have all the facilities required for any type of event. Toilets, power, lighting, access, parking and various transport links nearby.

HISTORY

The Old Joinery has an exciting and rich history. The land which the venue sits on was the site of the Cornish Revolution in 1497. The banks of Deptford Creek where the opening scenes of a bloody battle that saw 16,000 Cornish rebels slaughtered at the hands of Henry VII.

The building itself fortunately has a less bloody but equally as rich history. Being the house of many craftsman in its time The Old Joinery is the epitome of British ingenuity and industrialism. Built in 1860 it initially supplied the bustling Thames of its transport as a boat yard, launching them straight into Deptford Creek that runs alongside.

Throughout WW1 and WW2 German bombers targeted the area destroying half of the joinery but failing to knock it down. Once rebuilt the workshop was used by various tradesmen, in most recent years as joiners' yard and scenery workshop building events and sets for shows across Europe and further afield.

2016 sees The Old Joinery entering a new phase inviting the creative industry through its doors to fill the walls with a new type of craftsmanship of art, performance and music.
