The Dommering Foundation processes personal data of those who have submitted an application to the fund. This takes no other form than an archive of application documents and correspondence following the application.

We do this to be able to achieve the goal of the foundation – promoting the latest and innovative art – and to be able to assess and process applications. We keep this archive as a possible research object into trends in the art sector covered by us. We do not sell, publish or otherwise distribute any personal data. We do not use cookies. We do, however, post information on the website about projects to which we have contributed financially.
