

Fair Play: The Perfect Date

Take the lead and make a date! Invite your partner to the couch with a short conversation opener like, "Hey, I'd like us to celebrate our relationship by doing what we like to do most—popcorn and a movie! I hear that this one explores how we can create even more balance and efficiency in our home by working together in a new way that benefits us both. Are you into that? Then meet me on the couch!"

Make some popcorn and invite your partner to watch the highly anticipated documentary based on the New York Times Bestselling book — Fair Play.

FAIR PLAY aims to spark conversations that foster true fairness, meaningful connection, and healthy partnerships, starting with our most important organization, the home. Meet real families working to bring equity into their home life one dirty dish at a time and discover how a shift in communication style and an intentional plan can be game-changing and relationshipsaving.

Fairness is a 2-player game so plan to watch it together!

- Set a date
- Mark it on the calendar
- Commit to your date

Partners who've already been introduced to Fair Play report that 'date nights' are the best time to discuss new and improved ways to work together in the home because it's exactly in this type of safe and intimate setting that both partners are open and willing to shift the conversation toward adopting new solutions.

Cut out one of the invites below to share with those you want to watch the film with!

Option 1:

I would like us to celebrate our relationship by doing what we love movies and

(Fill in the blank: margaritas, popcorn, ice cream, etc.)

I hear this one explores how we can create even more balance and efficiency in our home by working together in a new way that benefits us both! Are you into that?

Then meet me on the couch!

Date: ______
Time: _____
I'll bring the ______
You bring the _____

Let's learn how to Play Fair!

Option 2:

YOU'RE INVITED
I would like us to celebrate our relationship by doing what we love: movies and
(fill in the blank: margaritas, popcorn, ice cream, etc.).
I hear this one explores how we can create even more balance and efficiency in our home by working together in a new way that benefits us both! Are you into that? Then meet me on the couch!
Date:
Time:
I'll bring the	EAID
You bring the	PLAY
Let's learn how to Play Fair!	