

Geneva SDG Community

What we are

The SDG Lab at UN Geneva, in partnership with the International Institute for Sustainable Development, brings together individuals, organizations, and Member States working to achieve the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and serves as a platform to enhance multi-stakeholder SDG implementation.

In this global context where inequalities have been amplified at an unparalleled level by the COVID-19 pandemic, it is clear the 2030 Agenda is more relevant than ever.

Purpose

The purpose of the Geneva SDG Community is to make the unique potential of Geneva's ecosystem accessible and effectual for SDG implementation. This is translated into practice through a transformative ecosystem approach aimed at:

- Convening, connecting, and aligning our diverse community
- Mobilizing knowledge and knowledge brokering
- Fostering innovation for policy and practice

Focus areas

The Geneva SDG community is in essence, a community of practice with a very large scope of work, namely the 2030 Agenda. Actors of the community work to address the broad range of issues addressed by the Sustainable Development Goals with specialized expertise and skills. To bring actors together in a way that adds value across thematic work areas, we focus on three cross-cutting enablers of SDGs implementation:

- Sustainable finance for SDGs
- Data to monitor and improve SDG action
- Digitalization as a tool for SDG implementation

SDG Community Members

As of September 2022, the Community has 215 organizations and 370 individuals, representing different sectors with varied expertise:
