

Aussie business back in cruise control after weathering the Covid storm

Allison Haworth West, CEO of Captain Cook Cruises. Picture: Rob Rickman

EXCLUSIVE

By LISA ALLEN, ASSOCIATE EDITOR & EDITOR, MANSION AUSTRALIA
7:37AM APRIL 18, 2022 • NO COMMENTS

"Welcome to my office," Allison Haworth West beams as she plunges into the crystal clear waters of Fiji's Monuriki Island, where the Tom Hanks survival drama Cast Away was filmed.

Armed with a business degree, the international ski instructor and author took control of her family's company, Captain Cook Cruises, two years ago.

It would be some time before the newly minted chief executive could visit her fleet of ships or the 150 staff employed by the cruise company throughout the Fiji Islands.

READ NEXT

THE TACKLE

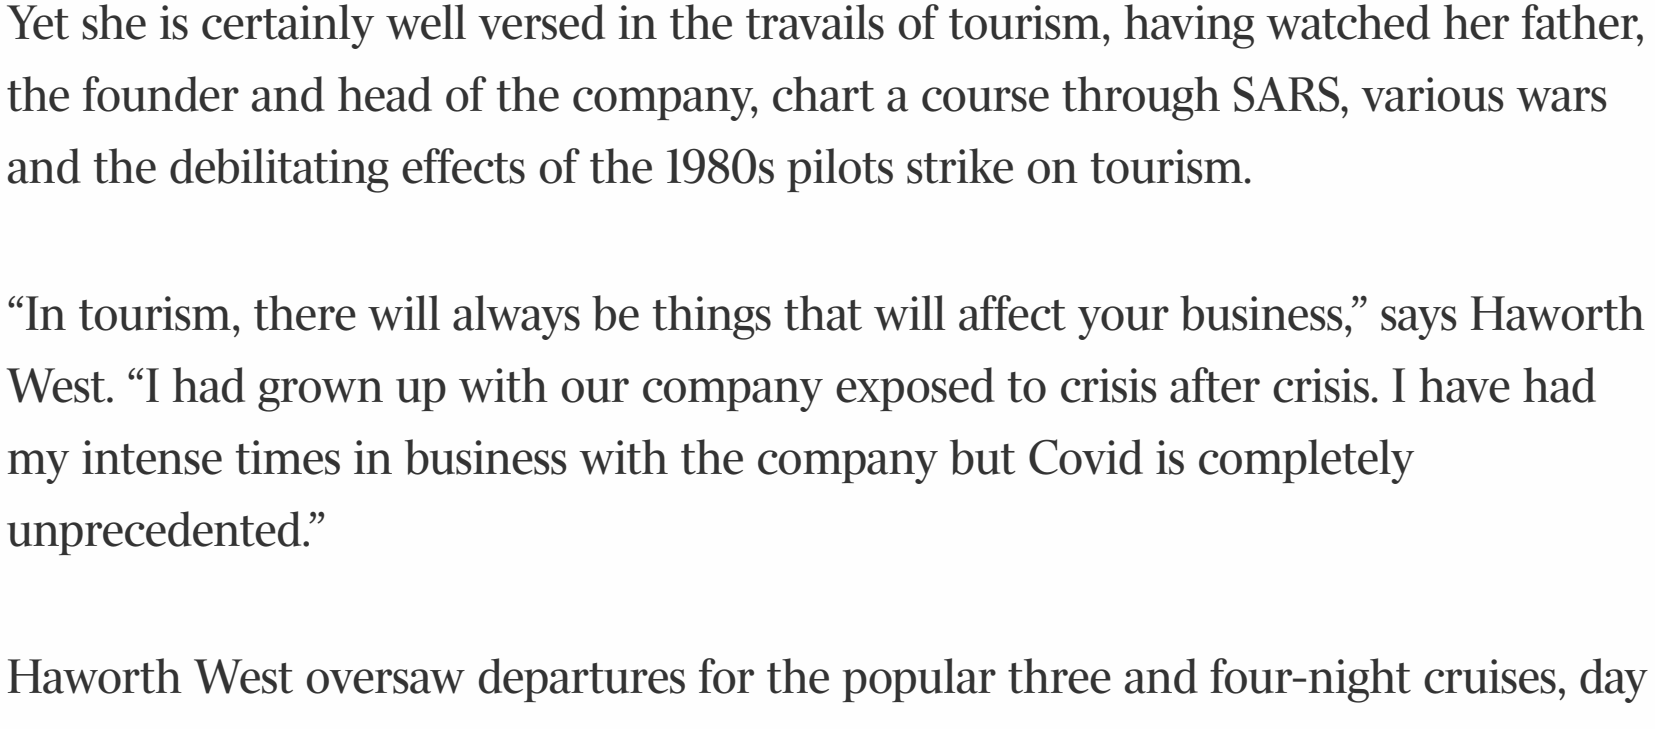

The Tackle: NRL come down hard on Dragons' shocking disrespect'

PAUL CRAWLEY

As the first waves of the pandemic hit, Haworth West was given just four days to close the company's entire operations after the Fijian government put tough Covid measures in place.

As the youngest daughter of Australian tourism royalty Captain Trevor Haworth and his wife, Geraldine, who together built up the company to cruise the waters of Fiji as well as Sydney Harbour (where they had a fleet of 15 ships) and the Murray River, Haworth West always knew that one day she would be heavily involved.

"I took control of the company at the beginning of Covid and I could not come here for two years," says Haworth West. "It was very challenging," she said, especially given the company had little revenue for two years. And while the Fiji government did all it could, there were no initiatives to bolster staff wages.

THEAUSTRALIAN.COM.AU | 02:25

Morrison hits out at 'heavy-handed' approach to Pacific Islands

Prime Minister Scott Morrison says any suggestion that the Solomon Islands is "under the control of Australia" is "offensive" and risks a "heavy-handed" approach to the Pacific region. Mr Morrison said he had been in regular contact with Fiji Prime Minister Bainimarama, who is the Chair of the ... More

READ MORE: Huge change for Fiji travel | Fiji islands to visit now that travel is open | Cruise bookings boom as ban lifts | The best escapes as cruising returns once more | What you must know before you cruise

Last week, the Reef Endeavour, one company vessel cruising the sublime waters of Fiji, was bound for the Mamanuca and Yasawa Islands, fully occupied.

Haworth West counts that as a portent of good things to come.

Yet she is certainly well versed in the travails of tourism, having watched her father, the founder and head of the company, chart a course through SARS, various wars and the debilitating effects of the 1980s pilots strike on tourism.

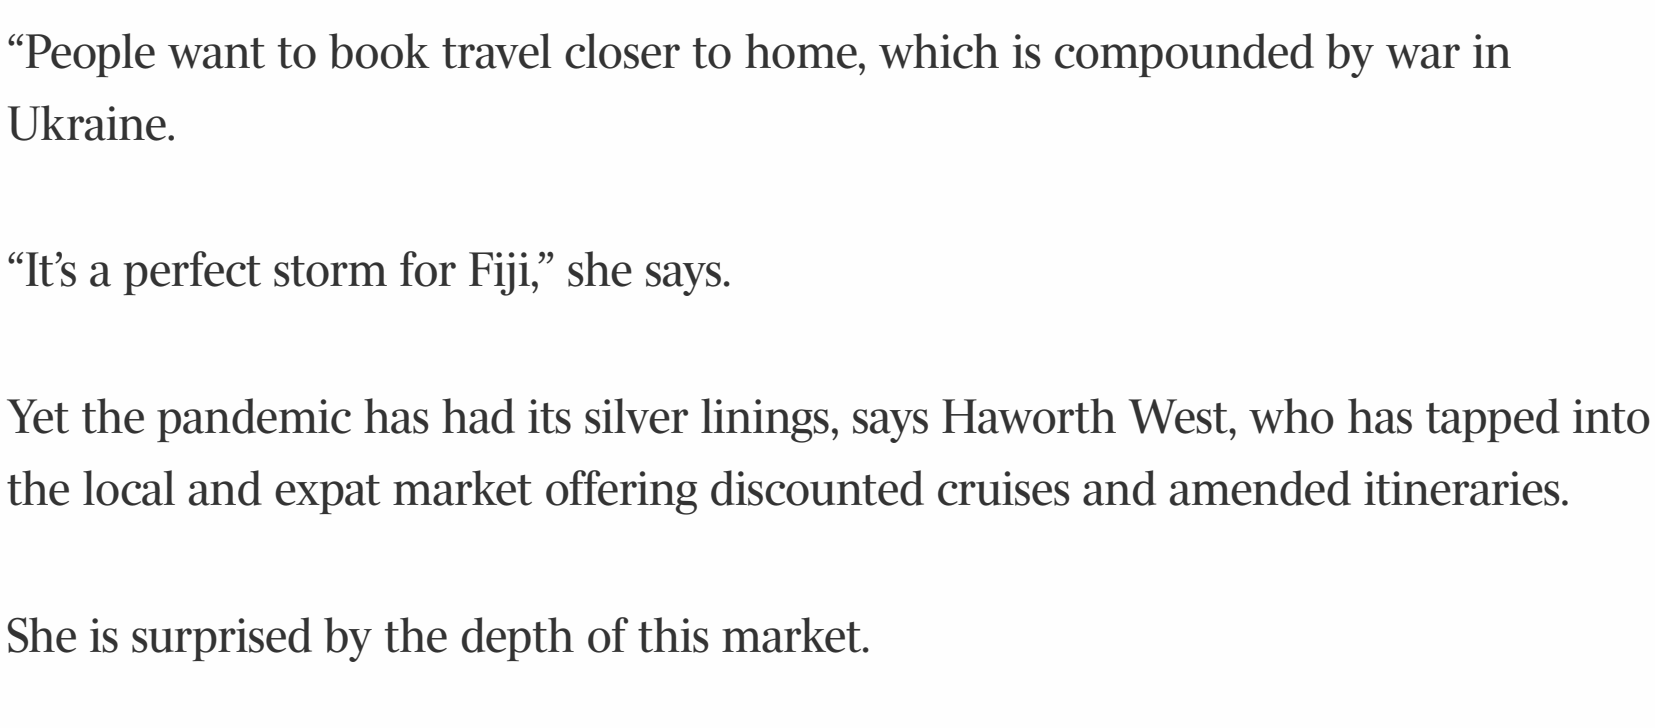

"In tourism, there will always be things that will affect your business," says Haworth West. "I had grown up with our company exposed to crisis after crisis. I have had my intense times in business with the company but Covid is completely unprecedented."

Haworth West oversaw departures for the popular three and four-night cruises, day cruises to the company-owned Tivua Island, which is surrounded by a 200ha coral reef, dinner cruises and charters of the Fiji operations of Captain Cook Cruises drop from healthy occupancies to zero at the height of Covid.

Early in the pandemic, around March 2020, she predicted it would finish by September or October that year.

"I was a year off in my projections," she says.

Haworth West runs the four ships in Captain Cook Cruises remaining operations in Fiji.

Allison Haworth West with members of her Fiji crew. Picture: Rob Rickman.

The Haworth family sold its 15-strong fleet of Sydney Harbour vessels and its Murray River operations in 2012 to Adelaide operator Sealink, now known as Kelsian, for an undisclosed sum.

The recovery has been patchy since Fiji reopened for tourism last December.

"With initial arrivals, there was a burst of activity but, sadly, that came at the same time as Omicron," Haworth West says.

"A lot of people had booked, you had the adventurous travellers in particular, but that slowed to a bit of a stop-start situation.

"Visitor arrivals from Australia are coming back, but the other markets have not come back yet," says Haworth West, who completed a company directors course some 18 years ago.

"People are looking for the dream of white sandy beaches."

And she is right. Tourism research shows that, post-Covid, Australians are willing to spend more on their holidays and are happier to holiday closer to home.

"People want to book travel closer to home, which is compounded by war in Ukraine.

"It's a perfect storm for Fiji," she says.

Yet the pandemic has had its silver linings, says Haworth West, who has tapped into the local and expat market offering discounted cruises and amended itineraries.

She is surprised by the depth of this market.

"Business is business, we had to invent new ways," she says. "Covid has let me be extremely hands-on in the areas of the business I am needed.

"I had to keep inventing new ways to keep afloat – no pun intended. Covid enabled us to adjust and develop itineraries for the local market and some of the adjustments such as creating a shorter cruise to the Lau Islands has seen the local market respond.

"The Fijians know how good it is in the remote areas we go to," says Haworth West, who is also president of the Australia Fiji Business Council.

"The first rooms to sell were the most expensive rooms ... Fiji has grown economically in the past 10-15 years.

"We would like that to continue and we look forward to it."

One of the Reef Explorer's itineraries to Fiji's Lau Islands has been adjusted from 11 nights to seven nights – and this has been of particular appeal to locals.

During the pandemic, Haworth West also negotiated a large charter for Australians who had been stranded on the Kiribati Islands for a year.

"These bits of business helped us maintain the ships, and keep the crew employed," she says

"Fiji has a positive road ahead – one of the great things for Australians is that Fiji is close and safe, it has beautiful clear waters and welcoming people."

The writer was a guest of Captain Cook Cruises and Tourism Fiji

LISA ALLEN, ASSOCIATE EDITOR & EDITOR, MANSION AUSTRALIA

Lisa Allen is an Associate Editor of The Australian, and is Editor of The Weekend Australian's property magazine, Mansion Australia. Lisa has been a senior reporter in business and property with the paper since... Read more

Share this article

More stories on this topic

- Return of cruising proves everything's shipshape
- Investors buy up airlines amid price surge
- In a lucky country, women caught in spiral of negativity

Topics

Coronavirus

THE AUSTRALIAN PRESENTS

Book now for The Australian's Global Food Forum

The 2022 Global Food Forum will present a world-class line up of industry experts to debate the critical issues facing Australia's $150 billion agribusiness sector as it and take a look forward to the next 10 years of Australian agribusiness.

📍 Crown Melbourne

📅 1 June 2022, 8:30AM - 5:30PM

Book Now

READ NEXT

Shock prognosis has Broncos reeling

Tesi Niu's injury is far worse than first thought with the young Brisbane Broncos fullback facing a long lay-off and possible surgery.

PETER BADEL AND NRL PHYSIO

Late Mail: Tigers recall two captains in reshuffle

Wests Tigers coach Michael Maguire has re-called two of his captains for the Easter Monday clash against the Eels.

FATIMA KDOUH, JAMES PHELPS, DAVID RICCIO, PHIL ROTHFIELD, PETER BADEL, MICHAEL CARAYANNIS AND TIM E. WILLIAMS

Son of a gun showing clean pair of heels in Stawell

The gift of speed clearly has jumped a generation as the son of former West Coast stalwart and Gold Coast coach stalwart and Gold Coast coach Guy McKenna emerges as one of the favourites for Australia's richest footrace.

SCOTT GULLAN

UPDATED Aussie star completes stunning comeback at Bells Beach

Two-time world champion Tyler Wright has put an exclamation point on her surfing rebirth with a stunning Easter resurrection at Bells Beach after almost retiring from the sport. FULL MEN AND WOMEN'S WRAP

ERIN SMITH, JASPER BRUCE AND EMMA GREENWOOD

PROPERTY Go ahead for Jam Factory revamp

The approved plans paves the way for a five tower redevelopment on Chapel Street, with construction alone expected to inject some $500m into the city's economy.

MATT BELL

Rocky: Vossy can mastermind his great mate Kenny's downfall

Tom Rockliff doesn't know if Ken Hinkley is missing Michael Voss. He definitely won't be if the Blues heap more pain on the Power today. EXCLUSIVE

TOM ROCKLIFF

SPONSORED CONTENT

The luxury cruise everyone's talking about

There's a new place to get your food fix, and you'd never expect ...

SPONSORED

Game, set, match: In praise of tennis

One mum explains why a tennis session with friends is the ultimate ...

SPONSORED

NO COMMENTS

You can now view your entire comment history via the My comments link in the subscriber menu at the top right of each page. Click here for more details.

Reader comments on this site are moderated before publication to promote lively, but civil and respectful debate. We encourage your comments but submitting one does not guarantee publication. You can read our comment guidelines here. If you believe a comment has been rejected in error, email comments@theaustralian.com.au and we'll investigate. Please ensure you include the email address you use to log in so we can locate your comment.

HI ALLISON

COMMENTS

MY PROFILE

Post a comment

2000 characters remaining

Post

Viewing Options

There are no comments yet, why don't you write one?

#1 Anxiety Relieving Pet Bed

Raised Edges To Help Support Your Fluffy Friend's Neck And Spine. Shop Now

A NOTE ABOUT RELEVANT ADVERTISING: We collect information about the content (including ads) you use across this site and use it to make both advertising and content more relevant to you on our network and other sites. This is also known as Online Behavioural Advertising. You can find out more about our policy and your choices, including how to opt-out, here.

More from The Australian

Back to top

OUR PRODUCTS

The Australian app on iOS

The Australian app on Android

Facebook Messenger app

Chinese site

Mind Games

Today's paper

All topics

TERMS OF USE

Standards of Practice

Editorial code of conduct

Subscription terms

Group publication terms

Privacy Policy

Relevant Ads Opt-out

Cookie Policy

Terms of Use

CONTACT US

Help

Contact info

Photo Sales

News archive

Copyright & Licensing

ABOUT US

About The Australian

Advertise with us

Our journalists

Subscribe

The Australian Plus member benefits

Sign up to Newsletters