

911-LIKE TELEMEDICINE DISPATCH FOR UKRAINE

Aimee allows anyone in Ukraine to connect to a Ukrainian-speaking dispatch volunteer from a mobile phone or laptop. Our dispatch volunteers will then arrange for American physicians to provide telemedicine consultations. Ukrainian Ministry of Health has provided Aimee physicians with liability and malpractice waivers (USA doctors cannot see patients in other countries otherwise). Aimee is created by VSee, the team that built that Telehealth system for NASA Space Station and currently working on the NASA Return to Moon Mission. In addition to Aimee, the VSee team is also deploying telemedicine to link Ukraine hospitals with each other to create a unified healthcare system.

What infrastructure is required?

VSee's Aimee can run on any device with network access. In addition, Aimee runs well on SpaceX's Starlink satellite network.

Who built Aimee?

Americans who care about Ukraine built Aimee. VSee is a video telehealth platform with a 14-year history supporting health efforts in North America, the Middle East, Africa, conflict zones, NASA at the International Space Station, and supporting refugee assistance efforts. Dr. Laura Purdy is our Chief Medical Officer, a retired United States Army physician with a national reputation for developing Telehealth solutions.

What is Aimee's value proposition?

VSee designed Aimee to deliver, for free, more than 100,000 telemedicine trauma care visits, and if needed, Aimee can scale massively within 24 hours. Since many conventional emergency room visits can cost $1,000 or more, Aimee can add more than $100M in value to Ukraine while saving tens of thousands of lives.
