Ouzo Ούζο

Ouzo is an anise flavoured spirit that is produced from grape must. Native to Greece and Cyprus it is characterised by its distinct anise flavour (although other spices may be added). Ouzo is traditionally enjoyed in Ouzeris (ouzo bars) as an aperitif and accompanied by meze (appetisers) and is most often served over ice and with water.

Tsipouro Τσίπουρο

Tsipouro, also known as tsikoudia or raki in Crete is a grape based spirit produced in a similar fashion to Cognac. However, instead of drawing flavour from barrel maturation tsipouros' clean crisp taste comes from the addition of local herbs and aromatic plants. It was originally produced by Greek Orthodox Monks in the 14th century and later in homes and villages for special occasions or festivities by select families who kept their recipes a closely guarded secret. It was not until the 1980's that legislation allowed for accredited distilleries to produce and bottle Tsipouro.
