Annual Report

Engage at Every Age

The mission of Princeton AlumniCorps is to inspire and build civic leadership among alumni across generations by engaging them in significant activities that influence and improve our society.

Engage at Every Age

Dear Friends of Princeton AlumniCorps:

In the spring of 1989, members of the Princeton Class of 1955 gathered for a mini-reunion at the Red Cross building in Washington, DC, the kind of event that usually engenders fond memories but rarely inaugurates a collective effort with staying power and an expansive vision. However, from a challenge issued by classmate Ralph Nader '55 emerged an organization that, in the ensuing 25 years, has mobilized thousands of alumni, supported hundreds of partner organizations, and become a leader in the field of alumni-driven civic engagement. This report offers a snapshot of Princeton AlumniCorps as we approach our 25th anniversary year. We are pleased to report that in 2013-14:

- Forty-two Project 55 fellows served in meaningful roles at thirty-two partner organizations across the country, joining more than 1500 Project 55 alumni.
- In the program's third year, Emerging Leaders welcomed thirty-two talented young professionals in New York and Washington, DC, and trained them to become more effective agents of change.
- With a new name and expanded resources, ARC Innovators (formerly Community Volunteers) launched in New York and Washington, DC. Alumni of all ages are now providing skills-based pro bono support to nonprofit partners in these cities as well as Chicago and New Jersey.

Additionally, in September 2013, the Board of Directors adopted a strategic plan with four ambitious goals to guide AlumniCorps over the next three years. We are already well into the implementation phase of these goals, and we look forward to sharing our continued progress with you as we seek to:

- Attract and mobilize new resources, partnerships, and leaders through a year-long celebration of our 25th anniversary in 2014-15.
- Re-engage PP55 alumni and energize them with new pathways to get involved.
- Enhance—and, where appropriate, expand—our existing core programs.
- Sustain organizational health through succession planning and expanded fundraising.

In so many ways since 1989, AlumniCorps has proven that public interest work is more effective and meaningful when undertaken not as an individual ambition, but as a shared effort. In 2013-14 AlumniCorps bid farewell to two vitally important members of this effort. Harry Berkowitz '55, longtime leader of our Connecticut fellows program, former Board member, and steadfast champion of all our work, passed away in March 2014. Shortly after, in June, we said goodbye to John Fish '55, who was the architect of the Public Interest Program (now Project 55 Fellowships), built the PP55 presence in Chicago, and led AlumniCorps as Board President (1997-2000) and Board Chair (2011-2014). John and Harry, each in his own way, breathed spirit into AlumniCorps. This report is dedicated with affection to the memories of Harry and John, who mentored many and exemplified the ideal behind AlumniCorps' motto of Engage at Every Age: creating social change is life-long work, with opportunities to act all along the way. As you read this report, we hope you will consider how you, wherever you are in the arc of your life or career, can get engaged.

Princeton Project 55 Fellowships

Since its inception in 1989, the Project 55 Fellowship Program has placed more than 1500 Princeton graduates in year-long fellowships and summer internships. In addition to working with effective, innovative nonprofits, these alumni benefit from a dedicated community offering seminars, mentorships, and friendship. AlumniCorps recruits, screens, and refers these fellows to public interest organizations across the nation. Through our work, our partner organizations gain access to bright and energetic talent for a minimal stipend, while our fellows develop a lifelong commitment to social change and prepare for effective civic leadership.

In 2013-14, 42 fellows served the public interest at 32 organizations in Boston, Chicago, Connecticut, New York City, San Francisco, and Washington, DC. Additionally, a record number of students—approximately 13% of the senior class—applied for the program.

Through The Alumni Network (TAN), AlumniCorps convenes and resources other alumni-driven public interest initiatives, many of them postgraduate fellowship or internship programs. Project 55 fellows benefit from joint seminar programs, an increased peer network, and broader exposure to the social sector through close collaboration with our 29 TAN affiliates.

2014-15 fellows at the Opening Orientation in May.

2013-14 Highlights

- 96% of fellows were satisfied or very satisfied with their fellowship placement.
- 100% of fellows recommend the PP55 Fellowship Program to other Princeton students.
- 94% of fellows felt their knowledge of the non-profit sector improved.
- 94% of fellows felt more confident in their ability to address public issues.
- 100% of placement organizations report that partnering with AlumniCorps is a worthwhile investment.
- 100% of placement organizations report that their fellow's work contributed to the organization's mission and advanced key programs.

“I've really enjoyed the rapport and relationships built with my co-workers and the learning experience that comes with that. Through both my work and interaction with staff, my exposure and knowledge about an array of urban issues in NYC - substance abuse, teen pregnancy, health insurance, domestic violence - has grown substantially, and I already know I will take the lessons learned at the Coalition with me in whatever I do next.”

- Amy Olivero '13

“The fellowship has been an enormously rewarding experience. Being in such a diverse work environment, filled with passionate people and also surrounded by children and teachers and others doing direct service work is extremely invigorating.”

Emerging Leaders

The Emerging Leaders professional development program is designed to help aspiring leaders in the nonprofit and public sectors develop the leadership capabilities, management skills, and confidence to advance their professional contributions and accelerate their careers. The program yields tangible, near-term value to participants (and their employers) and supports their longer-term leadership development.

Designed to address the growing leadership gap in the nonprofit sector, the program employs executive coaches to facilitate monthly, day-long sessions in New York and Washington, DC. Our model incorporates experiential learning and lessons from senior leaders, covering areas such as nonprofit skills and management training; individualized leadership-in-action “stretch” goals; self-assessment and awareness; networking and learning conversations with a range of experts; and facilitated peer support.

In 2013-14, Emerging Leaders had sixteen participants in New York and sixteen in DC. These talented individuals learned from each other and our expert facilitators Hilary Joel '85 and Yael Sivi. Additionally, a roster of volunteer guest speakers lent their insight and experience on topics ranging from fundraising to board relations to inter-agency collaboration. After the program concluded in February, a competitive application process yielded a new class of 32 Emerging Leaders who began the 2014-15 program in June.

2013-14 Highlights

- In a post-program survey, 100% of the 2013-14 Emerging Leaders said they were more effective managers and leaders because of the program.
- 89% of participants said they are more likely to seek increased leadership responsibilities.
- 96% of participants said the program improved their self-awareness, self-management, social awareness.
- 100% of participants report that their understanding of different models and styles of non-profit leadership improved.

DC Emerging Leaders at their first session.

“My personal goals for the program were well exceeded. My hope was to leave the program with a few practical tools to approach my work. I did not anticipate such a transformation of self and the feeling of authentic connection with my fellow Emerging Leaders.”

- Tosin Durotoye, Program Manager
NeighborWorks America

“...I went into the program not knowing what to expect and was completely blown away by the results and everything that I learned. Every time, I would come home with a stack of notes and would talk to my co-workers about ideas and takeaways from each session for days afterward. I really grew my skills a lot during the program, and that has given me an extra confidence boost as I take on new work responsibilities.”

AlumniCorps Profiles: The People and

Julian Forde

Julian Forde, Emerging Leader

Julian Forde currently serves as an Alumni Advisor at KIPP Team Schools in Newark, New Jersey. KIPP is a network of college-preparatory charter schools that are located in underserved communities throughout the United States. KIPP aims to reform education and eliminate disparities in educational outcomes by fostering a culture of achievement and holding its students to rigorous performance standards. At Team Schools, Julian provides support to almost 260 KIPP alumni who seek guidance with applying to college, funding their education, choosing an academic or professional track or successfully obtaining employment.

Julian first learned about Emerging Leaders through a colleague at KIPP, and decided to apply to the program based on her glowing testimony. He hoped to gain individual management skills and develop strategies for increasing his impact on KIPP and the young adults that he serves. Julian credits Emerging Leaders with improving his confidence and giving him a sense of clarity about where his career is headed. Of the program, Julian says: "I've learned that I am powerful and confident, and I'm less likely to second-guess myself. I've gotten better at managing myself and communicating my goals....Without Emerging Leaders, I wouldn't be where I am today."

Sandra Mukasa '12, PP55 Fellow

Sandra Mukasa '12 worked as a health educator at the Center on Halsted in Chicago, which provides comprehensive services to LGBT and HIV positive individuals. In addition to HIV testing and counseling services, Halsted also offers a leadership development program for youth aged twenty-four and younger, food and shelter programs, mental health services, and senior programming.

At Halsted, Sandra received on-the-job training that taught her to perform in-house HIV testing and sexual health counseling. Over the course of her fellowship year, Sandra provided almost 200 HIV testing and counseling sessions. Sandra assisted in training department staff members in best practices for HIV testing and providing support through the hotline. She also answered phones at the Illinois HIV/STD testing hotline, connecting individuals to HIV testing sites and providing support to people who were newly diagnosed as HIV positive. Sandra credits her fellowship experience with illuminating how deeply the understanding and discourse around HIV have changed in recent history, and how race, sexual orientation, and class impact access to healthcare. She says that "my experience highlighted the variety of ways in which one can approach public health, and the importance of providing sensitive and compassionate care to all members of the community."

Sandra Mukasa '12

Following her fellowship in 2013-14, Sandra joined Mathematica Policy Research as a Policy Associate. She hopes that in her current role, she'll be able to gain research skills that will be useful in the public health realm. She is eventually interested in going back to school to earn a master's degree in public health and find innovative ways to contribute to health and well-being.

Partners at the Heart of Our Work

World Faiths Development Dialogue, Partner Organization

Located in Washington, DC, World Faiths Development Dialogue (WWFD) aims to end global poverty by exploring commonalities and bridging gaps between religious institutions and international development organizations. Katherine Marshall *69, Executive Director and founder, looked to Project 55 to offer an ambitious and innovative perspective on this work.

*Katherine Marshall 69

Having hosted seven Project 55 fellows, WWFD illustrates the positive impact that a fellowship year can have on both fellows and partner organizations. This year at WWFD, Christopher Riley '12 took on responsibility for organizational finance, grant writing, and accounting. Early in his fellowship year, Christopher put together a proposal for a demanding and unusual project in Senegal that engaged religious leaders in family planning outreach to improve reproductive health outcomes. Christopher wrote grants, produced advertisements, and facilitated meetings with high-level government and religious leaders. The most rewarding part of working on this project, according to Christopher, was “feeling like I was doing my part to improve reproductive health in a climate that is dangerous for women, while being able to use the skills that I developed at Princeton.”

Christopher's fellowship year gave him insight about the impact of a career in the public interest. He is now in graduate school pursuing a degree in international economics and cites Katherine as an invaluable source of support in that decision. Katherine says that Project 55 fellows “provide the organization with energy and neatly fit into our ambitious and fast-moving agenda.”

Catherine Malmberg Dannenbrig *05, ARC Innovator

Catherine Malmberg Dannenbrig *05 first became interested in ARC Innovators after being invited to an introductory event at the Princeton Club of New York. She had been looking for a way to become more engaged with socially conscious organizations and was enthusiastic about having the opportunity to do so while using her expertise in the fields of real-estate, sustainability, and design. AlumniCorps matched Catherine with Peer Health Exchange, an organization that works to give teenagers the knowledge and skills they need to make healthy decisions.

Peer Health Exchange's New York staff had been working out of donated office space for the past 10 years, but unfortunately that arrangement will expire at the end of 2014. The organization needed to find new office space for their staff in Manhattan – not an easy task for any company, and all the more challenging for a nonprofit on a limited budget. Catherine, who has worked in real estate development since receiving her M.Arch from Princeton's School of Architecture, started by quantifying their current space and their needs and desires for their new space through a measured site survey and personnel interviews. After evaluating their workplace and goals for the new space, she reached out to her network within the real estate industry to gauge the current state of the market and expand on her initial research of options. Peer Health Exchange ultimately chose to negotiate a lease at a non-profit incubator space downtown. The project allowed Peer Health to plan ahead for their upcoming move and minimized the staff time spent on trying to resolve their real estate needs, allowing them to focus on their core mission.

Catherine states that the most rewarding part about the ARC Innovators project was having the opportunity to build a relationship with Peer Health and feel like her skill set helped to solve a real need within the organization. In her own words, “The opportunity to take a skill set I already had, but use it in a totally different way that is helpful to a nonprofit is incredibly satisfying.”

ARC Innovators

ARC Innovators (formerly Community Volunteers) connects experienced alumni to short-term, impactful projects with our non-profit partners. Alumni who become Innovators are exploring career transitions, transitioning to retirement, returning to the workforce, seeking nonprofit experience, or looking for a way to connect with their communities. Our nonprofit partners benefit from pro bono help on strategic projects that will have a lasting impact on their organization and community.

In 2013-14, the program expanded from Chicago and New Jersey to New York City and Washington, DC. Kick-off events in both cities marked the growing reach of the program, as well as the interest from alumni in high-impact projects with our non-profit partners. Gathering at the Princeton Club of New York in November 2013, more than 80 members of the alumni community and nonprofit sector joined for a night of networking and information about encore careers. The panel featured Marci Alboher, author of the Encore Career Handbook and Vice President of Encore.org, and was moderated by Anne Tergesen '86, a Wall Street Journal reporter who writes about retirement. Other panelists included Karen Ali '78, a former lawyer who recently completed an ARC Innovators project in New Jersey, and Sharon Keld '80, Development Officer at AlumniCorps and former Peace Corps volunteer and marketing professional.

Grif Johnson '72, Program Leader and Board Member Kef Kasdin '85, Hilary Joel '85, Board Chair Kenly Webster '55, Tina Sung '71, and Marci Alboher at the DC kick-off event.

The program launch event in May 2014 in Washington, DC, featured a panel and networking breakfast. Moderated by Marci Alboher of Encore.org, the panelists included Grif Johnson '72, Board Chair of Wilderness Leadership Learning (WILL), ARC Innovator and attorney; Hilary Joel '85, founder and principal of WJ Consulting and former principal at American Management Systems (CGI/AMS) and at Booz, Allen & Hamilton; and Tina Sung '71, Vice President at the Partnership for Public Service and founder of Experience Matters. AlumniCorps proudly partnered with the Class of '71 Legacy Initiative and Encore.org to bring the kickoff to Washington, DC. Program expansion is made possible by the Chet Safian Innovation Fund, a special AlumniCorps fundraising initiative that supports programs consistent with the efforts of Chet Safian '55, who passed away in April 2013.

Outreach Initiative

The AlumniCorps Outreach Initiative was formed in response to our most recent strategic plan and aims to re-engage former fellows and foster meaningful connections for alumni with an enduring interest in civic engagement. As AlumniCorps looks toward its 25th anniversary, we are focused on broadening our reach while increasing our value to alumni and the public interest sector in general. We aim to energize our alumni by providing them with new pathways for involvement, including networking events, local and national dialogues, and interest groups that speak to the causes they care about.

As a first step in this process, AlumniCorps has hired a full-time Outreach Coordinator who is responsible for organizing programming geared toward former fellows and interns. AlumniCorps also conducted an Alumni Impact Survey, which identified new strategies for improving and expanding our programming, and collected information on the professional and personal accomplishments of our community of 1507 fellowship alumni. In the upcoming year, we plan to roll out a number of alumni-centered programs that speak to the core interests of former fellows. The outcome of this effort will be a more energized and organized national network of Project 55 alumni working together to strengthen fields of practice in the nonprofit sector and lead AlumniCorps forward.

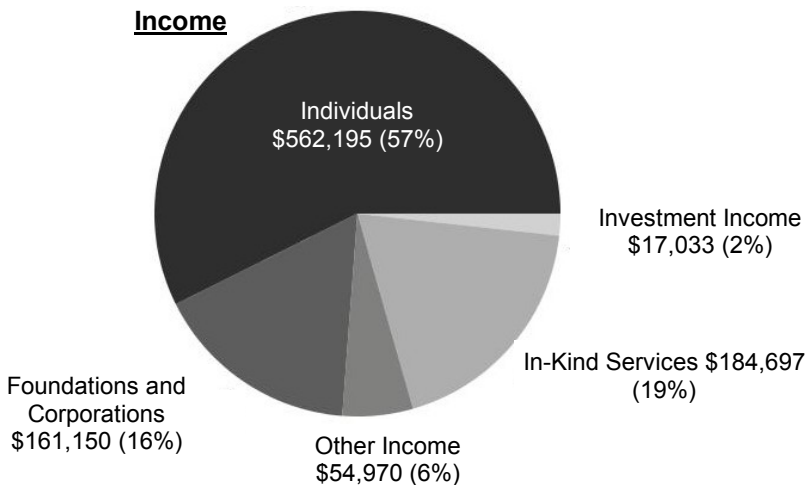

Financials

July 1, 2013 through June 30, 2014

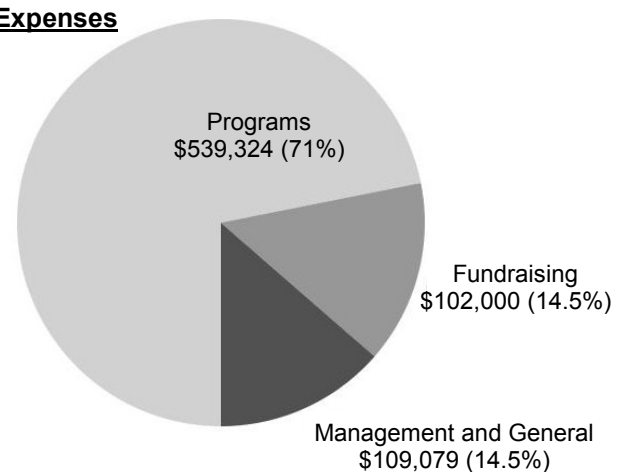

Thanks to generous support from more than 600 individuals, foundations, and corporations (see following pages), totaling over 1000 gifts, income to Princeton AlumniCorps from all sources totaled $980,045. Our accrued operating expenses, including in-kind expenditures, totaled $750,403.

The Keystone Society, whose members have included Princeton AlumniCorps in their estate plans, is critical to ensuring our continuing legacy. We now have members from four decades of Princeton alumni. It is easy to add a codicil to a will or list AlumniCorps as a beneficiary; if you have named us in your estate plans please let us know. Unless otherwise designated, Keystone gifts are added to the AlumniCorps endowment, which totaled $1,170,773 as of June 30, 2014.

Get Involved

Princeton AlumniCorps is a volunteer-driven organization. Every year, more than 200 people contribute their time and expertise – providing oversight for the organization as board and committee members, hosting events, running regional programs, and mentoring fellows. Volunteers are absolutely crucial to our success in carrying out the Princeton AlumniCorps commitment to engage alumni in the public interest. Please let us know if you want to learn more about volunteer opportunities and programs in your area.
