

IC&RC Certified Peer Fact Sheet

What is a Peer?

Peers are individuals with lived experience in recovery from substance use, mental health, or co-occurring challenges. They use their recovery experience to provide support and hope to individuals working through their own recovery.

What is the difference between a non-certified Peer and an IC&RC Certified Peer?

While non-certified and IC&RC Certified Peers both use lived experience to guide individuals through the recovery process, only IC&RC Certified Peers are equipped with a scope of practice and peer core competencies. They are bound by ethical guidelines which protect the Peer, the individual, and the public. In addition, IC&RC Certified Peers are required to:

- ◁ Participate in peer specific training in the competency areas of:
 - Advocacy
 - Recovery and Wellness
 - Mentoring and Education
 - Ethical Responsibility
- ◁ Apply for certification through a formal application process
- ◁ Sign and adhere to a peer-specific code of ethics
- ◁ Take and pass the IC&RC Peer Recovery examination
- ◁ Pursue continuing education credits to stay current on emerging trends and best practices

Why a Certified Peer?

Certification provides public protection and quality care. It requires a demonstration of competence and proves that the Peer is well trained, educated, and skilled in providing appropriate services. IC&RC Certified Peers are bound by a code of ethics which includes a formal sanctioning process if questions of ethics arise.

Certified Peers are required to pass the IC&RC Peer Recovery examination. The examination has been developed through a peer-driven process to standardize the certification process and assess the knowledge, skills, and abilities needed to provide peer recovery services. It is based on a rigorous, legally defensible, psychometric job analysis and updated regularly to assure content stays current with changes in the field.
