STATE’S ATTORNEYS RESPOND TO TRONE COMMENT THAT “A PROSECUTOR IS JUST ONE SMALL JOB”

LARGO, MD – After David Trone dismissed the job of State’s Attorney in an interview on WYPR today, current and former State’s Attorneys Gregg Bernstein, former Baltimore City State’s Attorney, Scott D. Shellenberger, current Baltimore County State's Attorney, Anthony B. (Tony) Covington, current Charles County State's Attorney, John McCarthy, current Montgomery County State's Attorney, Rich Gibson, current Howard County State’s Attorney and Ivan Bates, current Baltimore City State's Attorney made the following statement highlighting Angela Alsobrooks’ record:

“As State’s Attorney, Angela worked to keep more than one million people safe, lowering violent crime by 50 percent, standing up for victims of domestic violence, treating victims and families with respect and fighting for justice. We don't know anyone who thinks that is a 'small job.' In fact, it's one of the most important jobs in public service. As current and former State’s Attorneys, we know not only how hard the work is but also how important it is to keep people safe.

“We hope Angela's opponent will stop diminishing her impressive record and focus on the issues at hand.

“We’re so proud to support Angela both because of her record and because she knows how important our work - and the work of people across Maryland - is. She knows what it means to keep people safe. And she’ll be one of the few Senators with that firsthand knowledge.”
