to Welcome Baltimore!

The National Alliance of Preservation Commissions is pleased to present its Fifth biennial National Commission Forum—the only national conference specifically for preservation commission members and staff. Forum's unique combination of educational breakout sessions and working roundtables brings you the best information from commissioners, staff, and other experts working on preservation's front lines across the country. You will return from Forum energized and full of ideas and information to build your local preservation program!

Learn from some of the most experienced preservationists in the country about the essential ingredients for a successful local preservation program.

Participate with representatives from communities with similar resources to learn how they address key preservation issues.

Work with national experts to craft policies that you can use in your community.

Enjoy the camaraderie and celebration that only Forum can bring!

Welcome from the chair

It is hard to believe that two years have passed since our last Forum, but here we are in Baltimore! It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the National Alliance of Preservation Commissions' Fifth biennial National Commission Forum.

A city rich in arts, culture, heritage, and time-honored tradition, Baltimore has gone through a dramatic renaissance in recent years with neighborhood revitalization initiatives, impressive tax credit rehabilitation projects, and an unparalleled commitment to making preservation an integral part of comprehensive city planning. I am confident that you will find Baltimore a perfect location for this unique conference dedicated to local preservation commissions and their issues. With over 72 historic districts, Baltimore clearly takes preservation seriously. Called "Charm City," Baltimore offers unequalled hospitality. I am sure that you will enjoy your stay.

Special thanks to the Maryland Historical Trust staff; the City of Baltimore staff; Preservation Maryland; the Maryland Association of Historic District Commissions; the National Trust for Historic Preservation; and most of all, to our Forum sponsors whose energy and support made this conference possible.

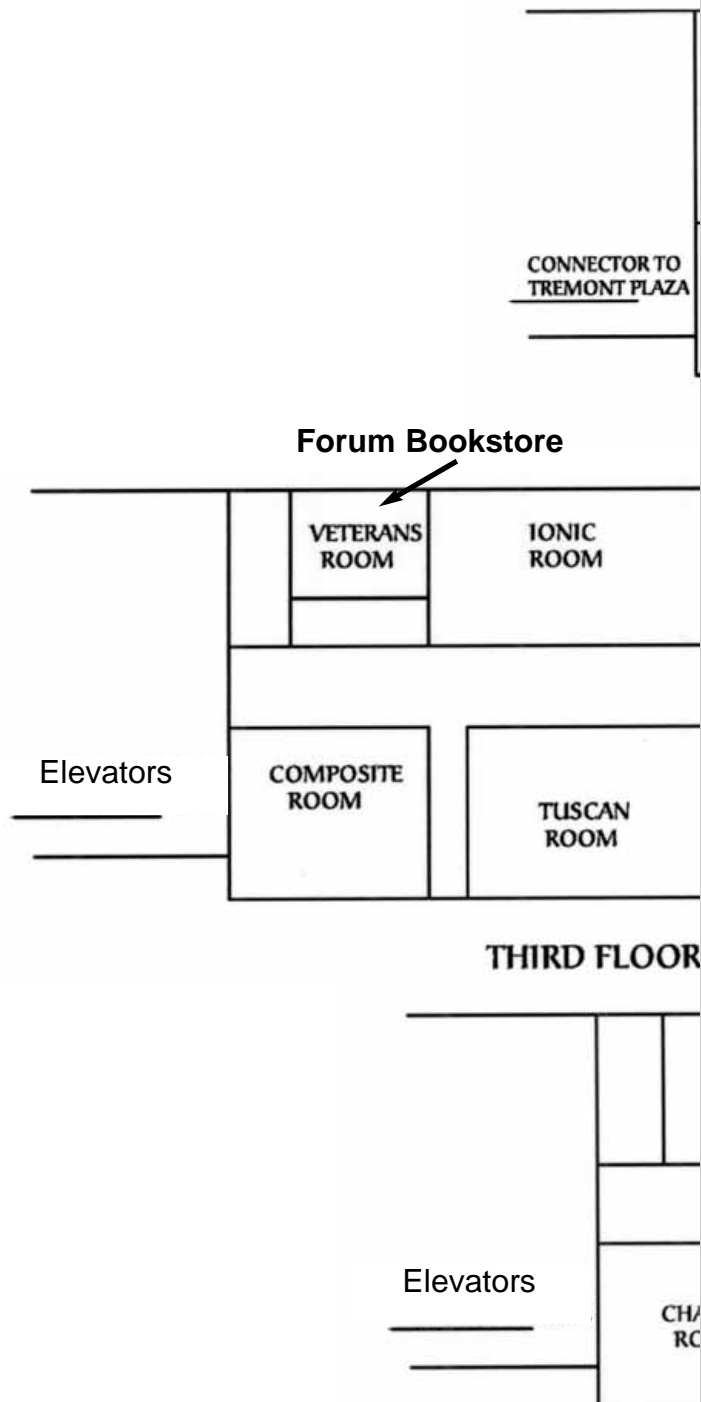

The NAPC is dedicated to building strong preservation programs through education, training, and advocacy and Forum is where it all comes together. So enjoy your stay in Baltimore as we continue the Forum tradition of strong content, camaraderie, and celebration!

Welcome!

Brian Goeken
NAPC Chair

Getting around the Tremont Grand

To reach the Tremont Grand from the Tremont Plaza, take the elevator to the fifth floor and turn right.

No trip to Baltimore would be complete without sampling the City's abundant seafood! From steamed crabs and boiled shrimp to exquisitely prepared seafood pasta, there's something for every taste.

Hons!

"Many Baltimoreans will call you 'hon'. Don't get offended....it's not meant to be an insult or degrading. It's just a Baltimore thing. There's even a place called Cafe Hon, where you can grab a great meal and check out some local 'hons.' Baltimoreans love tourists and locals alike....so when we call you 'hon', understand that it is our way of being friendly!"

Annapolis, Maryland Mobile Workshop

Take a journey through 3 centuries of architecture and 4 decades of preservation in this National Historic Landmark and locally designated district. We will explore the 18th century district that grew around Gov. Francis Nicholson's Baroque town plan, the oldest state capitol building in continuous use, and the creative ways Annapolis has addressed design review issues.
