BARISTA LATTE ART

Coffee as an art form in the heart of Kassel

Barista is the term for coffee artists who create delicate pictures and motives on your coffee specialities with frothed milk. But it's not only the drinks' looks that is focused on by the barista, it's the taste of them first and foremost. The art of designing and shaping the milk foam in this way is called latte art and requires skill and practice. We have specialized our staff in this craft and gladly demonstrate our skills. We hope the pictures and motives on our drinks bring you little moments of joy and that we can welcome you in our café again soon.

Have a look at our latte art on our Facebook and Instagram profiles

TREPPENSTRAßE

Germany's first and oldest area for pedestrians only

You are on Treppenstraße (Stairstreet), an area created as a precious project right after World War II in 1953. As Germany's first zone exclusively for pedestrians, it was opened on the 9th of November in 1953 and connects Kassel's Central Station with Ständeplatz and Friedrichsplatz in the center of the city. With its style typical for the post war period and its design structuring it into areas of steps and podiums, Treppenstraße has a special charme that has even been used as a film set for several movies – one example is “The Last Pedestrian” (Der letzte Fußgänger, 1960) with Heinz Erhardt in the leading role. Treppenstraße overcomes a height difference up to 15 meters with 104 steps and a length of 275 meters. The houses flanking Treppenstraße were also created in the beginning of the 1950s and are listed for historic preservation and monument protection. By doing so, the former flair of this special period of time can be preserved even in modern Kassel. We are proud of being a part of this history and filling it with life – and intend to continue doing so in the future.

HERKULES

UNESCO World Heritage Site

The Herkules is regarded as Kassel's landmark. On your way to Kassel, you can already see him tower above the city from afar. He is located in the Bergpark Wilhelmshöhe (Wilhelmshöhe Mountainpark) and both were acclaimed as UNESCO World Heritage Sites in 2013. The statue is about eight meters tall and back then, being finished in November 1717, it completed the construction of the whole baroque castle (Octagon) underneath. Today, the name "Herkules" refers not only the statue itself, but rather to the general construction including the Octagon which serves as starting point of the Bergpark's famous Wasserspiele (Water Features) as well.

FRIDERICIANUM

One of Europe's first public museums

Located at Friedrichsplatz, the Fridericianum has been constructed over a period of ten years in 1769.

Structurally connected to a part of the city's fortifications from the middle Ages, namely the Zwehrenturm (tower), it served as one of Europe's first public museums right from the start. The Zwehrenturm, constructed in 1330, was later visually adapted to the Fridericianum's style of classicism. The Fridericianum was severely damaged during World War II but later restored in the same shape and form as before. To this day it is used for changing art exhibitions and is the centre of every documenta, the world renowned exhibition of contemporary art in Kassel.
