The Need for a Safe, Risk-free Workplace

One of Hilton's top priorities is to achieve continual improvements in health and safety. Staff review policies, processes, and procedures to ensure risks are properly assessed, with actions taken to protect the safety of all workers.

When Hilton branched out from Woolworths into their own private entity in 2018, there was already a strong understanding of Pegasus Worker Management and how it supports the safety of Woolworths contractors. That same risk management and certainty was needed at Hilton.

A Trusted System

Head of Safety and Wellbeing, Chris Taylor, brought his experience and knowledge of the Avetta platform in the transition from Woolworths to Hilton Foods.

Now, we manage the safety and compliance of more than 2,800 workers from 208 companies for Hilton Foods across 4 sites

"This was always going to be more appealing to me because it means less work for us," rest," said Chris Taylor, Head of Safety and Wellbeing at Hilton Foods.

Consistent Standards for Risk Management

The biggest risk for Hilton Foods is a worker suffering an injury or accident while on one of their sites.

Through Pre-Qualification, Workforce Management, and Learning Management products, Hilton Foods' contractors have become more compliant and safe workers – proving their qualifications and completing their safety training.

"The benefit is you've got a consistent standard for everyone that's being employed," said Chris. "It's ensuring that the risk is managed."

Ahead of the Game

Having Worker Management already in place has been crucial when COVID-19 became an issue on job sites globally. Site access solutions linked to worker profiles, and the ability to crosscheck contractors on site, helped Hilton Foods quickly find the information they need to trace a worker's time on site.
