In NSW, if you are involved in a road and traffic accident that was the fault of an unregistered vehicle you are entitled to make a claim for compensation. In New South Wales all motor vehicles are required to be registered...

Registration ensures that all motor vehicles on the road are covered for Compulsory Third Party (CTP) insurance in the event that they are involved in a road and traffic incident. If a motor vehicle is not registered then the CTP insurance on the vehicle is not valid. The fact that an unregistered vehicle is uninsured means that a lot of people assume that if they are injured in a motor vehicle accident involving an unregistered vehicle than they will not be eligible to receive compensation for their injuries.

Walker Law Group has assisted a large number of clients to receive compensation when involved in a road and traffic incident with an unregistered vehicle.

If the at fault vehicle is unregistered, then the claim for compensation is made on the Nominal Defendant. The Nominal Defendant just means that the claim is allocated to an insurer under the NSW scheme. Claims for compensation made to the Nominal Defendant are handled the same as any other motor vehicle accident compensation claim. This means that, if you are injured in a road and traffic incident with an unregistered vehicle, depending on the circumstances of the accident and the extent of your injuries, you may be entitled to claim compensation for:

- Medical and rehabilitation expenses.
- Weekly wage payments.
- Funeral expenses.
- Compensation to relatives.
- Damages for loss of earnings.
- Damages for pain and suffering endured.
