Sometimes credit card transactions may fail due to bank restrictions or other issues. If your card is declined, contact your bank to understand why this happened. They might have blocked international transactions, so let them know you're paying an Australian company and they'll lift the restriction. Be aware that multiple attempts from the same IP address can trigger fraud control measures, resulting in a temporary block. If you encounter errors on the purchase page, such as "Enter the number of licenses..." ensure you've entered '1' in the correct box. If issues persist after 8 hours, report them using our contact form with the URL you're trying to access. After attempting to make a purchase, check your email for a confirmation containing your license serial number. If it says "declined" but you suspect the transaction went through, verify this by looking for an email with a copy of your serial number. Regarding charges exceeding expectations, review your invoice carefully and note that administrative fees apply when paying by check or if special pricing isn't applied. Also, be aware that our bank's currency conversion might result in slight differences from what you see on your statement. If you've purchased software but need to move it to a new machine, first uninstall it from the old one. Then download and install the latest version on the new machine using your registration code or recovering it if needed. In case of a hard drive crash within six months of purchase, you can reinstall the software free of charge by downloading it from our website. For purchases outside this timeframe, you'll need to upgrade to the latest version by following the instructions at www.nch.com.au/upgrade. We recommend that you keep a backup of your installation file in case you need to reinstall it. This is the fastest method and best option to get back to your original file. If you don't have it, please contact us with as much information as possible about your purchase. If you can receive it from your registration email that's the better info to send. If you want to upgrade your installation, please visit www.nch.com.au/upgrade. How to make a backup of my Installation file The activation process for software applications from NCH.com.au requires careful consideration of various factors, including device compatibility and registration details. If you encounter issues with the Activation Feature, it may be necessary to purchase an upgrade using the provided link (www.nch.com.au/upgrade) or ensure that unnecessary devices are listed in settings to avoid triggering warnings related to license limitations. On Windows computers, the registry stores registration code details. However, if the person entering the code is not logged into a user account with administrator privileges, activation may fail. It's also important to note that each 12- or 13-digit serial number can only be activated once, and incorrect entry of characters (including spaces) may result in errors. When reactivating licenses after a computer crash, it's recommended to contact support using the provided form. Activation errors may occur if the City/State/Post/Zip) Code fields are incomplete or inaccurate; therefore, please double-check that your full post code is entered correctly and choose the corresponding country from the dropdown box. For international addresses, specific formatting instructions apply: for example, a borough in London would be entered as "Westminster (City) / London (State/Province) / W1V9DD (Post Code)", with the choice of United Kingdom or New Zealand (or France, depending on the country). Burn is pretty straightforward, it has a clean GUI that gets you started fast.
