Britney Spears was born on December 2, 1981, in McComb, Mississippi, and raised in Kentwood, Louisiana. As a child, she attended dance classes and excelled at gymnastics, winning numerous competitions. However, it was singing that truly captivated her. At age 8, Britney auditioned for MMC (1989) but was rejected due to her young age, prompting her to join the off-Broadway show "Ruthless" as the title character. Later, at age 11, she successfully auditioned for MMC (1989), becoming a mouseketeer alongside stars like Justin Timberlake and JC Chasez of *NSYNC and Ryan Gosling. Her big break came when she was signed to Jive Recording Artist in the late 90s, releasing her debut album "...Baby One More Time" in early 1999, which became an international success.In more recent news, Britney Spears spent Father's Day with her son Jayden, after previously estranging from him. She captioned a mirror selfie on Instagram, saying "Went to church today !!! Sang and praised !!!" The post featured the mother-son duo attending church and singing together.Britney Spears Reunites With Son Jayden, Reflects on His GrowthBritney Spears Shares Heartwarming Moments with Sons on Instagram"Such a great time at Disneyland today..." the singer captioned an August 2019 Instagram photo series. She expressed her joy when her sons, now older and more independent, agreed to be photographed with her. The "Stronger" star has been sharing fond memories of her family vacations over the years, from arts and crafts sessions in 2018 to a trip to see Aladdin. In 2015, she celebrated Halloween with her boys, while in previous years, they enjoyed surfing trips to Hawaii and visiting the Happiest Place on Earth. Spears has been taking her sons to various events, including the Los Angeles premiere of Smurfs 2 and the Broadway production of The Lion King.Britney Spears had a huge career comeback in 2011 with her album Femme Fatale after struggling with personal and profesional problems. She has been married three times, first to Jason Alexander, then Kevin Federline from 2004-2007, and lastly to Sam Asghari since 2022. Britney was born on December 2, 1981, in McComb, Mississippi, where she grew up in nearby Kentwood, Louisiana, with her parents James "Jamie" Spears and Lynne Spears. She has two siblings, Bryan and Jamie Lynn. Her childhood relationship with her mother was close while her relationship with her father was strained due to his struggles with alcoholism and financial troubles that led to bankruptcy in 1998. Britney's interest in performing started at a young age, she would perform for family gatherings and even took up gymnastics at 8 years old. She auditioned for The All-New Mickey Mouse Club but got picked two years later when she was 11, where she met other future stars like Justin Timberlake and Christina Aguilera.In 1994, Britney Spears returned to her hometown and attended high school at Parklane Academy in McComb, Mississippi, where she played basketball. After leaving the Mickey Mouse Club, Spears focused on developing her music career and eventually signed with Jive Records. In September 1998, she released her debut single "... Baby One More Time," which topped the Billboard Hot 100 chart in January 1999. The song's success led to her album of the same name reaching No. 1 on the Billboard 200 charts and selling over 25 million copies worldwide. Spears went on to win four awards at the 1999 Billboard Music Awards, including Female Artist of the Year and Best New Artist.In 2000, Spears released her second album, "Oops!... I Did It Again," which debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard 200 and sold over 1 million copies in its first week. Her personal life received more scrutiny as rumors circulated that she was dating Justin Timberlake from *NSYNC.In 2001, Spears released her third album, "Britney," which marked a departure from her innocent image and sound. The single "I'm a Slave 4 U" featured a more mature tone, while her performance at the MTV Video Music Awards in 2001 showcased her ability to adapt to different styles.In 2002, Spears had a leading role in the movie "Crossroads," which grossed over $60 million worldwide. That spring, she and Timberlake announced they had broken up.The following year, Spears made headlines for her performance at the MTV Video Music Awards, where she shared a kiss with Madonna and Christina Aguilera. This dramatic stage moment marked another evolution in Spears' public persona, which was influenced by Madonna. Her next album, "In the Zone," featured vocals from Madonna on the track "Me Against the Music" and included her hit single "Toxic," which earned her a Grammy Award for Best Dance Recording.By January 2004, Spears appeared to be rebelling against her intense work schedule when she married childhood friend Jason Alexander in Las Vegas but had the union annulled two days later.Spears got entangled with backup dancer Kevin Federline, whose girlfriend was pregnant at the time. The media frenzy surrounding Spears' private life only fueled their relationship. They tied the knot on September 18, 2004, in Studio City, California. Later that year, she released Greatest Hits: My Prerogative, which included her take on Bobby Brown's "My Prerogative," seemingly a response to her critics and the media scrutiny. The album sold over 5 million copies, although it wasn't as successful as In the Zone. Despite declining sales, Spears seemed content, announcing she was pregnant with her first child in April 2005. She gave birth to two sons, Sean Preston Federline and Jayden James Federline, before filing for divorce in November 2006. This led to a series of public incidents, including being caught driving with her infant son in her lap and a subsequent custody battle with Federline. Spears checked into rehab multiple times and shaved her head in 2007, claiming "my mom is going to freak." She spent time at a treatment center that year as well. In January 2008, a judge granted Federline sole custody of their children, suspending Spears' visitation rights. Despite this setback, she released the album Blackout that same year, which reached number two on the Billboard charts. However, her performance at the MTV Video Music Awards was marred by poor lip-syncing and sluggish dancing. A few days later, Spears was charged with hit-and-run after a parking lot incident.Spears' family believed she was suffering from postpartum depression while in hospital, but her manager, Sam Lutfi, had a different influence on their daughter's life, which caused tension between them. In 2008, Spears' father, Jamie, took control of her assets and finances as part of a conservatorship order due to concerns about her well-being. However, many fans felt that Jamie used the arrangement for financial gain and to maintain control over Britney.The conservatorship was extended multiple times, with Jamie gaining indefinite control in 2008. In 2012, Britney's fianc Jason Trawick was added as a co-conservator, but he only had authority over her daily decisions, not her finances.Meanwhile, Spears continued to release successful music, including the album "Circus" in late 2008 and its hit singles "Womanizer" and "Circus." She also made appearances on TV shows like "How I Met Your Mother" and performed at the MTV Video Music Awards.In 2011, Spears released her sixth No. 1 album "Femme Fatale," which included popular tracks like "I Wanna Go" and "Till The World Ends." Her personal life also improved, as she got engaged to Trawick in December 2011. However, they broke up in early 2013.The following year, Spears joined the judging panel of "The X Factor," but left after one season. In 2013, she released her eighth studio album "Britney Jean," which received mixed reviews. Three years later, she released "Glory," which debuted at No. 3 on the Billboard 200 chart.Britney Spears Residency and Career Hiatus: A Timeline of Her Life in Las Vegas and BeyondThe year 2021 was a pivotal time for Britney Spears, with multiple documentaries and specials shedding light on the singer's conservatorship. FX's "The New York Times Presents" series featured two episodes focused on Spears' career and conservatorship, while Netflix released "Britney Vs Spears," an investigative documentary that delved into the controversy surrounding her conservatorship. CNN also aired a special report, "Toxic: Britney Spears' Battle for Freedom," which included interviews with Spears' friends and former employees. Meanwhile, fans rallied around the singer, staging protests in support of the #FreeBritney movement.In June 2021, Spears delivered a heartfelt statement in court, detailing her life under the 13-year conservatorship. She expressed her desire to regain control over her life, describing the arrangement as abusive and emotionally draining. A month later, Spears and her lawyer filed to end the conservatorship, marking a significant turning point in her battle for freedom.As public interest in the case continued to grow, Spears' father eventually agreed to step down as conservator in August 2021, paving the way for the arrangement's eventual termination. In November of that year, a judge ruled to end the conservatorship, allowing Spears to take back control of her estate and finances.In May 2023, Fox aired "TMZ Investigates: Britney Spears: The Price of Freedom," a documentary series that provided an in-depth look at Spears' life following the end of her conservatorship. However, Spears heavily criticized the program on Instagram, labeling TMZ as the "trashiest news channel" and accusing them of perpetuating a history of cruel reporting towards her.Spears has been open about her personal struggles, including her marriage to Iranian-American trainer and model Sam Asghari in June 2022. The couple met while working on Spears' music video for "Slumber Party," and began dating shortly after. However, their relationship was marked by tragedy, as they revealed a miscarriage just months into their marriage.The couple's days together were ultimately numbered, as they announced their separation in July 2023, citing irreconcilable differences. Asghari filed for divorce soon after, seeking spousal support and sparking a public outcry from fans who had rallied around the singer throughout her conservatorship battle.Throughout her life, Spears has turned to writing as an outlet for expression, publishing two books with her mother, Lynne: "Brittney Spears' Heart to Heart" in 2000, which offered a behind-the-scenes look at her early career. Despite facing numerous challenges and setbacks, Spears remains a beloved figure in the entertainment industry, known for her resilience and unwavering dedication to her craft.Britney Spears career spans several decades, including her early days as a teenager alongside Lynne Spears in a young adult novel called A Mothers Gift in 2001.Following their public split, Lynne released Through the Storm in 2008, detailing the family's struggles after Britney's rise to fame. The next year, journalist Steve Dennis wrote an unofficial biography titled Britney: Inside the Dream based on interviews with friends and performers close to Spears.Spears recently published her first solo memoir, The Woman in Me, in October 2023, offering a candid look at her life and career, including her conservatorship, complicated relationship with sister Jamie Lynn, and romance with Justin Timberlake. In a recent excerpt published by People, Spears revealed that she became pregnant with Timberlake's child while dating him, then had an abortion. The singer expressed anguish over the experience.As of July 2023, Celebrity Net Worth estimates Britney's net worth to be around $70 million, although it has fluctuated greatly over the years. Her wealth has been boosted by her Las Vegas residency and album sales.Tyler Piccotti is a News and Culture Editor for Biography.com, where he crafts engaging content around movies, TV shows, and emerging talent in music, acting, and sports.
