NOVA Greece is a digital satellite pay TV platform owned by Multichoice Hellas. It was launched in December 1999. NOVA offers Greek subscribers an array of international and domestic programmes, includin news, sports, movies, music, children's programmes and general entertainment channels. The service also provides access to the majority of popular Greek terrestrial TV channels along with a number of Greek terrestrial radio stations. International programmes are offered in their original soundtrack, with Greek subtitles. Some interactive services like games, cinema & theatre listings, lottery numbers, news headlines and weather reports are also provided. In 2008, Forthnet acquired Netmed, the parent firm of NOVA Greece. In 2010 Nova Greece had 363,679 subscribers, while in March 2012 this number increasd to 391,252. HD service counted 52,968 subscribers in 2011, a 86.8% rise from 28,356 subscribers in 2010. The service broadcasts in standard definition using the DVB-S MPEG-2 format and also in High Definition using the DVB-S MPEG-4 format. The service is encrypted with Irdeto conditional access system and was recently changed to only allow new subscribers to use a specific set-top box. This has raised some controversy among customers. NOVA channels are also available through the IPTV service of On Telecoms, but subscribers must pay an extra fee for this service. NOVA Greece currently has over 50 subscription channels in its line-up, from Greece, Europe and abroad as well as access to over 200 FTA channels. The line-up also includes over 100 radio stations. However, some critics argue that total customer satisfaction with NOVA is not comparable to that of subscribers of other European satellite providers. =====At the heart of Greece's innovative spirit lies Nova, the pioneering company that brought the internet and pay-TV to the nation. As a driving force in home entertainment and communication, Nova seamlessly weaves cutting-edge technologies with expert executives' prowess, culminating in a multifaceted bouquet of Pay-TV, broadband internet, and fixed telephony services. Since its inception, Nova has expanded its horizon by integrating electric power services under the "Nova Energy" umbrella, further enriching its portfolio. With an extensive network spanning 52 cities across Greece, featuring 93 stores, Nova proudly serves over 40,000 businesses and a substantial percentage of Greek households. The backbone of Nova's success lies in its people - a team of visionary thinkers whose dedication is paramount to growth. By fostering an environment that encourages employees to pursue their dreams and invest in professional development, Nova unlocks the full potential of its workforce. Equal opportunities are at the forefront, and the organization zealously navigates employee career paths. Nova beckons like-minded individuals who embody the essence of teamwork, passion, and dynamic enthusiasm. For those seeking a vibrant work environment that nurtures growth, Nova stands ready to welcome you as an integral part of its dynamic family. Since its launch in December 1999, the Nova brand has been synonymous with high-quality satellite television services in Greece. In April 2008, Forthnet acquired Netmed, the parent company of Nova, for €430 million. This strategic move enabled the platform to reach new heights, with over 550,000 broadband internet subscribers and 457,000 pay television subscribers by 2020. Nova offers an extensive range of international and domestic programmes, including news, sports, movies, music, and children's content, as well as a selection of popular Greek terrestrial TV channels. The platform also provides access to over 200 free-to-air (FTA) channels and more than 100 radio stations. To enhance the viewing experience, Nova has implemented HD broadcasting, with over 50,000 subscribers enjoying high-definition services. The NovaBox HD 831 digital satellite receiver is the current flagship model, offering users a seamless viewing experience. However, some controversy has surrounded the platform's encryption policy, which requires new subscribers to use only company-approved set-top boxes. This change has sparked debate among users. In recent years, Nova has expanded its services through partnerships with other companies, such as On Telecoms and Pace. The Nova Satellite Package includes digital satellite receivers manufactured by Pace, ensuring that users receive high-quality broadcasting. With its diverse range of channels and innovative features, Nova Greece remains a leading player in the Greek pay TV market. # Channel List Nova's channel line-up boasts over 50 subscription channels, including a mix of Greek, European, and international content. The platform also offers access to over 200 FTA channels and more than 100 radio stations. Some of the popular channels available on Nova include: * MEGA * ANI * ALTER * STAR * ALPHA * MACEDONIA TV # Interactive Services Nova provides a range of interactive services, including games, cinema listings, lottery numbers, news headlines, and weather reports. These features enhance the overall viewing experience and cater to different interests. # Technical Information Nova broadcasts in standard definition using the DVB-S MPEG-2 format and high-definition using the DVB-S MPEG-4 format through Hotbird 8 satellite at 13°E. The service is encrypted with Irdeto conditional access system. Poor image quality, caused by heavy MPEG compression used to add more channels, affects not only Nova but also terrestrial repeaters, worsening the picture of all national TV stations.
