The contest aims to give visibility to young people from around the world, helping them make a name for themselves in the fashion and runway worlds, serving as an important platform to introduce them to their local regions and eventually nationally and internationally. Additionally, one of the most notable features of this contest is the opportunity it provides for its participants through exclusive scholarships to study as flight attendants. In this new edition, 23 Cantabrian young women have been selected in the auditions to compete on January 19th at Vioo for the regional crown. The only requirements for selection are being between 18 and 27 years old during the Miss Grand Espaa contest and measuring over 1.60 meters tall. After being selected, participants receive classes in runway, oratory, modeling, etc., as well as personalized training with instructors and choreographers. On this path to the grand contest, young women are always accompanied by one of the great professionals in the sector, Candela Rodríguez, Miss Espaa 1995 and director and driving force behind Miss Grand Cantabria. Cande is responsible for teaching them all the necessary knowledge about the catwalk and modeling needed for the big day, while guiding, supporting, and orienting them to give their best, always with great empathy and affection. Once at Miss Grand Cantabria, candidates will have to demonstrate everything learned during these months of preparation by performing several catwalks in front of the public or giving speeches where they put their oratory skills to the test before the jury, composed of professionals from the fashion, hairdressing, and aesthetics sectors, among others. As Cande explains, despite being a beauty contest, physical appearance will not be the only criterion that the jury will value, as other factors such as personality and character, involvement, and evolution in the classroom will carry great weight at the time of taking the final decision. Furthermore, it is not just about delivering the title of Miss Grand Cantabria, as all participants will enter the competition in different categories where sponsors are involved, including a study grant from Kompass Aviacin's Flight Attendant School.
