As a result, numerous sportsbooks offer Ligue 1 betting odds, making it easier for both new and experienced bettors to participate. The 2020-2021 season saw an unexpected twist when Paris Saint-Germain failed to secure the title, with Lille finishing first on 83 points despite having less star power compared to PSG. Monaco secured third place in Ligue 1, earning a spot in the Champions League qualification rounds for the 2021-2022 campaign. However, their season was cut short by Shakhtar Donetsk in the final qualification hurdle.The transfer window before the 2021-2022 season focused on Paris Saint-Germain's efforts to regain their top position. With the acquisition of Lionel Messi and other notable signings like Sergio Ramos and Gianluigi Donnarumma, PSG solidified their status as Ligue 1 betting favorites for the upcoming campaign.Lyon's Aggressive Transfer Window Leaves PSG UnscathedPSG has bolstered its squad with Lionel Messi, while Lyon's departures signal a rebuilding phase.---Despite Lyon's aggressive spending in the transfer market, Paris Saint-Germain (PSG) remains the dominant force in Ligue 1. The recent window saw PSG bring in Lionel Messi, further solidifying their position at the top of the table. In contrast, Lyon's mass exodus of key players, including Xherdan Shaqiri, Islam Slimani, Marcelo, and Bruno Guimares, has left them lagging behind PSG.Lyon's approach in the transfer window was marked by a willingness to sell key assets, signaling a rebuilding phase for the club. This move is evident in their decision to send away several important players, which will undoubtedly impact their chances of winning the league this season. On the other hand, Lille has been boosted by the arrival of Hatem Ben Arfa, who brings his experience and goal-scoring prowess to the team. While Lille may not have the same level of star power as PSG, they still pose a threat to the title with their top player Ylmaz.However, for several clubs in Ligue 1, this season's relegation battle looks increasingly precarious. With at least six teams facing serious danger of being relegated, the stakes are high, and only time will tell which teams can withstand the pressure.All six teams in danger of relegation this season - St. tienne, Lorient, Metz, Bordeaux, Clermont Foot, and Troyes - need to improve their defense and start earning points regularly to avoid the drop. These teams are among the worst defensive sides in Ligue 1, which puts them at a disadvantage with many strong attacking teams in the league. Paris Saint-Germain is the clear favorite to win the league this season, having built a double-digit lead by the end of 2021 and making it difficult for other teams to catch up. However, PSG's odds are too low to offer any value to bettors. Instead, focus on the trio of Messi, Neymar, and Mbappe, who will be entertaining to watch this season as they create scoring opportunities for themselves. Additionally, keep an eye on Burak Ylmaz of Lille, who could have a significant impact on their team's performance, and Wissam Ben Yedder of Monaco, who was the second-leading scorer in Ligue 1 last season and could help them exceed expectations this year.
