Scotty Cameron is reviving its Studio Style putter line with modern technology after a 20-year hiatus. The new line features updated designs, materials, and manufacturing methods while retaining the classic name. Here are four key points about the 2025 Scotty Cameron Studio Style putters:Scotty Cameron Launches New Studio Style Line of Putters With High-Contrast Alignment and StabilityThe new line features high-performance options for both blade and mallet players, including mid-mallets with "ring-weighted" builds using aircraft aluminum.The mid-mallets have a contrasting dark color to the 303 stainless steel body, creating an alignment aid and expanding the footprint of the putter.New designs focus on highlighting the front blade and rear blade to help with alignment, especially for players who align with features that go from the face to the back.Both Squareback 2 and Fastback will be available in Long Design counterbalance options, while the Newport and Newport 2 shapes return as anchors of the lineups with new face technology.The addition of wider body versions like the Newport 2.5+ captured players looking for a wide-body blade, featuring an aluminum sole plate to increase perimeter weighting and forgiveness.The Squareback shape will come in three configurations, including a single-bend Squareback, plumber's neck Squareback 2, and Squareback 2 Long Design with a stiffer shaft and heavier sole weights.The Scotty Cameron Studio Style putters are returning to retail after a 20-year absence. The new putters feature a modern single-bend shaft design for a near-face-balanced feel. They will be available in various models, including the Newport 2, Newport 2.5 Plus, Fastback 1.5, and Catalina, all of which can also be played by left-handers. The putters come equipped with a new Full Contact Slim paddle-style grip featuring chain-link texture and Scotty's iconic 7 Point Crown engraved on the face. The Studio carbon steel insert provides a softer sound and more consistent performance. The putters will be available for pre-order starting February 25th, with standard models retailing at $499 and Long Design models costing $549.The all-new Scotty Cameron Studio Style putter lineup is set to deliver unparalleled performance for golfers worldwide. This innovative range boasts a unique blend of sound and feel, thanks in part to the introduction of carbon steel inserts. These cutting-edge components not only dampen vibrations but also provide a softer impact experience compared to traditional materials like teryllium, stainless steel, or aluminum.A key highlight of the Studio Style lineup is its 12 diverse models, each designed with input from touring professionals. The Newport, Newport Plus, and Squareback series are part of this revamped collection, featuring bold visual transformations that set them apart from previous Scotty Cameron releases. Notably, the Fastback and Squareback heads now boast high-contrast alignment systems to aid in maintaining a square face during address.Denny McCarthy, a touring pro with an impressive track record in putting, has found particular success with the new Fastback model. Initially skeptical of switching from his trusty GoLo putters, McCarthy discovered that the Fastback offered a similar soft feel and improved forgiveness thanks to its ring-weighted design.To complement these exceptional putters, Scotty Cameron's latest offerings also feature satin-mist finishes, chain-link textured grips, and advanced alignment systems. This next-generation lineup promises to revolutionize the world of golf, providing players with unparalleled performance and precision.Scotty Cameron's signature three-dot designs now feature a vibrant cherry red hue.The Scotty Cameron Studio Style Newport putter takes center stage, showcasing its sleek design. This is according to GolfWRX. Scotty Cameron's revamped Studio Style putters will hit authorized Titleist golf shops on March 14, priced at $499 for standard lengths and $549 for the extended Long Designs versions.
